Energy assistance available beginning in January

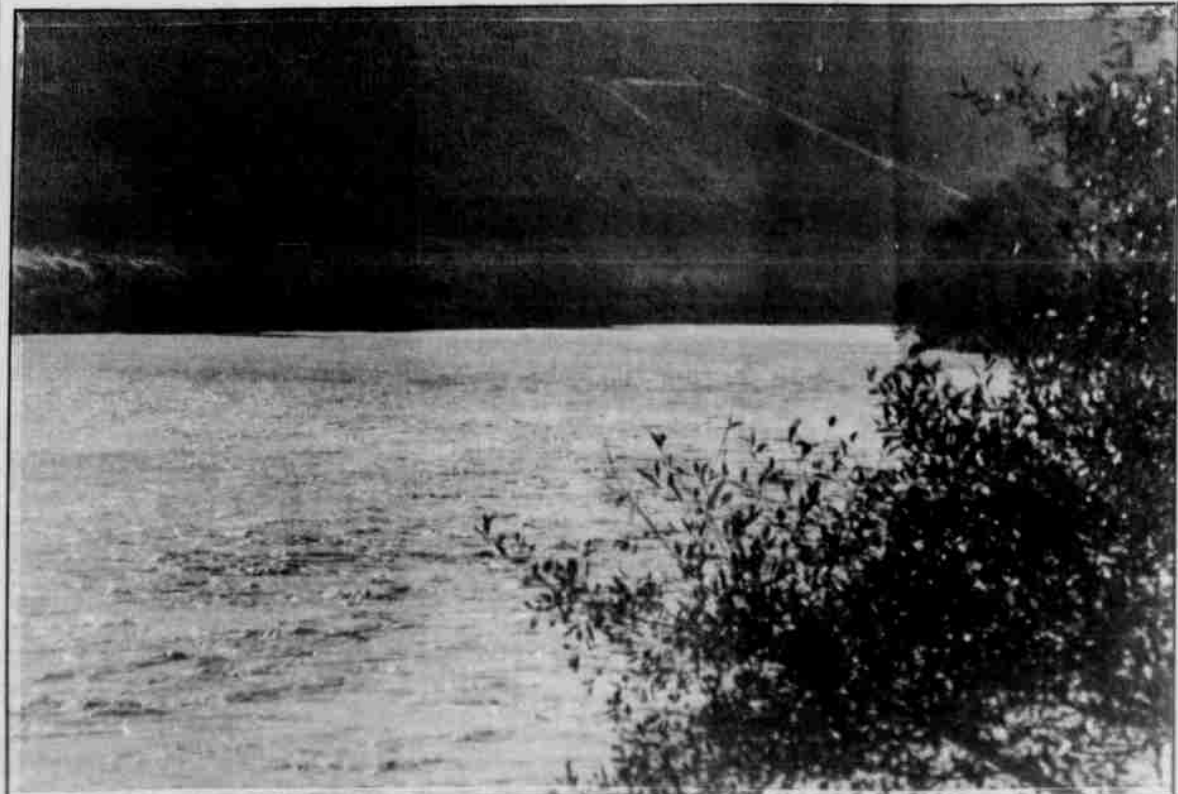

Low income residents of Crook, Deschutes and Jefferson counties in need of financial help to pay their winter heating bills will be able to apply for energy assistance at Central Oregon Community Action Agency Network (COCAAN) offices. Each household must provide proof of income and heating source to be eligible for this single payment assistance. Households using wood or pellet stoves for heating must provide receipts.

Appointments can be scheduled starting December 11 by calling 1-800-500-7248. Intakes begin January 8, 1996 at sites in Bend, Redmond, Prineville, LaPine, Madras and Warm Springs. No walk-in appointment will be accepted. Funds are limited and are on a first-come, first-serve basis. Eligibility screening for low income senior and disabled households begins the last week of November 1995.

Last winter approximately 2,800 households throughout Central Oregon received help totaling $593,943 at an average of $212 per household. This year, COCAAN expects to serve 1,900 households. The region's allocation for this winter is projected to be $397,942, a 33 percent decrease from the prior year's funding allocation. However, as of November 1, 1995, Congress had not approved this year's allocation.

This is the 17th year that the Low Income Energy Assistance Program (LIEAP) has been financed by the federal government. No Oregon state funds are involved. The LIEAP is administered in Oregon by the Oregon Department of Housing and Community services through a network of 27 local organizations throughout Oregon.

The Deschutes River retains its beauty and serenity even when temperatures fall below freezing. Fog is common along the river when the river's temperature is above the temperature of the air.
