Book tells of river life

A River Lost tells the familiar story of an ancient culture infringed upon and altered forever by modern technology. It is the story of how the construction of the Grand Coulee Dam led the destruction of a way of life for members of the Arrow Lake Tribe. "Since mat" and her great grandmother "Toopa" tell of the culture and day-to-day activities of life on the Columbia River before and after the dam.

Engagingly written and beautifully illustrated, A River Lost ($12.95 each plus $2.00 for postage and handling from Hancock House Publishers) gives a true life account of Pacific Northwest history written at a level to be enjoyed by readers of all ages. Author Lynn Bragg's heart-felt depiction of life on the Columbia River comes from first-hand knowledge obtained by living among the Arrow Lakes Tribe, now part of the Colville Confederated Tribes. Together with the illustrator, Virgil "Smoker" Marchand of the Arrow Lakes Tribe, Bragg has created a compelling and wonderful book that emphasizes the importance of culture, family and respect for the earth and all its creatures. A River Lost gives the reader a stark reminder of the fragility of the environment and shows man's precarious relationships with nature and technology.

The book is available from Hancock House Publishers, 1431 Harrison Avenue, Blaine, WA 98230-5005 (800) 938-1114 Fax (800) 983-2262.
