Tribal services survey mailed to members

Tribal members 20 years of age and older, a total of 1,910, received the third Tribal Services Survey earlier this month. The survey asks for comments and suggestions on services offered to the community by the Confederated Tribes. Results of the survey will be compared to the 1994 Tribal Services Survey to measure the Tribe's progress. The results will be like a "report card" from tribal members. Responses are due by July 15. Surveys will be summarized by faculty members of the University of Oregon.

If respondents sign their names, they will receive a copy of this year's ratings and become eligible for a $100 prize. Names are separated from the survey so suggestions and ratings will be confidential as in years past.

Tribal members are asked their satisfaction level of specific services, ranging from very satisfied to very dissatisfied. There is adequate room to comment. Tribal services are separated into policy functions and operating functions including education, human services, business and economic development, housing services, public utilities, natural resources and public safety.

Contact the tribal planning department at 553-3270 if any you have any questions or if any pages of the survey are missing.
