Getting away can be tricky

You have been caught on the spot before. You innocently approach the desk of a co-worker to ask a simple question, and before you know it, half of the office has convened on the spot and joined the conversation. Although these informal gatherings can be useful at times to help break up the tension and monotony of the work day, they can also be useless time drains. Here are some ways to get out of the early morning huddle before it's time for lunch.
State the obvious. Simply mention that you have work to complete and therefore must get back to it. The direct method is often the most effective because no one can be offended by your lack of participation if other work awaits.
Ask to be excused. If co-workers continue to linger over certain issues that no longer concern you, simply ask them to excuse you and make your way back to your desk. You might want to say something like, "This really isn't my area of expertise, so I think I will get back to my phone calls."
Be aware of the time. This will help you to realize just how much of your day you are wasting. It never hurts to remind co-workers that the day is slipping away. Simply wait for a pause in the conversation and then say something like, "Well, it's 10:15 and I've got to get back to work." This awareness may remind other colleagues that they, too, have to get going on their various projects.
Set a time limit. The moment that you see you are being dragged into a nonproductive gab session, tell yourself that you will spend no more than 10 minutes involved in the discussion.

simply slip away. AS you find that you are being sucked into a conversation, start to physically remove yourself from the scene. As others enter into the conversation, head off to the perimeters of the gathering and from there return to your work.
If such a gathering takes place around your desk, come up with a way to get others to disperse. One of the best ways to get the message across is by standing up or by getting back to the work in front of you.

Sisters attend Oregon State Penitentiary gatherings

To the Editor,
During the past 15 months, Warm Springs tribal members Sylvia Wallulatam and her sister Nettie Shawaway have been entering the Oregon State Penitentiary and leading the Lakota Oyate-Ki Club in opening prayer at our club's gatherings. Hearing them speak in the Sahaptin language and sharing words about the Creator's blessings have been a special blessing in itself. We are thankful that Grandfather has blessed us with their presence.
The Native American prisoners at OSP and the families who bring their children to Lakota Club powwows look forward to having Sylvia and Nettie at our future gatherings. The Warm Springs people are gifted to have such Elders as these two and it would be good to listen to what they have to offer Indian people when they speak and lead in prayer.
For the Native American prisoners housed at the Oregon State Penitentiary, they bring a strong sense of cultural pride and self-confidence.

Keep all flammable materials well-away from your home. Propane tanks and woodpiles are away from structures and vegetation is properly cleared away.
Have proper spark arresters installed on small engines and equipment; welding is done inside a shop building or in a cleared area with fire tools at hand.
Have a valid permit to burn debris. Always burn in a cleared area, away from overhead branches; never leaving your fire unattended. Always notify Fire & Safety before burning.
Know the proper rules for starting and extinguishing a campfire. By placing hot charcoal briquettes in metal buckets, be fire safe.

Access routes are clearly marked with two exits from property. Family has a planned emergency evacuation route, in case of fire.
In case of wildfire, being prepared is my best defense. Water supply and equipment are reliable for firefighting and fire tools are readily available.
Know what to do if a fire occurs. Road signs and addresses are readily visible for arriving firefighting units.
Roof and exteriors of buildings should be of fire resistant materials, such as asphalt felt-roll roofing, tile, slate, cement shingle, sheet metal or aluminum.

Those attending the May 1 Lakota mini-powwow were, left to right, Klarice Westley, Cedar Westley, Freedom Westley, Gary Westley, Sylvia Wallulatam and Nettie Shawaway.

Summer Recreation in progress, trips planned

Warm Springs Summer Recreation Program is in progress as of June 24 and will run until August 9, 1996. Daily activities for children 6 years & older are conducted by Recreation Department staff and summer recreation youth workers. All participants must have signed consent waiver. A Summer Recreation schedule may be picked up at that time.
Kids at the Community Center that choose not to participate in the program will not be supervised.
The Summer Food Service Lunch Program will be served in the Social Hall during the noon hour Monday through Thursday. No outside food allowed at this time. No food is taken outside.
All Recreation staff participating during water activities are certified in lifesaving and/or Water Safety and Rescue. All Summer Recreation youth workers are certified in Emergency Water Safety.
Children who would like to attend

Friday field trips must sign up by Thursday and have consent form signed by parents. Trips are on a first-come first-served basis. There will be no Friday morning sign ups. Children 6 years & older are welcome to sign up. The Summer Food Program will prepare sack lunches for the children attending field trips.
No thongs, stereos or walkmans allowed on any field trips, no exceptions. Kids are not permitted to bring glass containers (pop bottles, etc.) to the Community Center or on field trips.
Any child leaving the center on the Field trip or special event must return with the Recreation group. Unless prior arrangements are made by permission slip signed and turned in by parents or guardians prior to departure.
There are eight Friday Field Trips on the schedule, they are: The Cove State Park, The Dalles/Petroglyphs, Oaks Park, Juniper Aquatic Center, Enchanted Forest, Clackamas Aquatic Center, Trout Lake, Washington Park Zoo.

Special thanks goes out to Healthy Nations of Warm Springs. With their assistance, Friday Field trips are made possible.
The Warm Springs Summer Recreation Program is pleased to announce that the SMART reading program will be offered throughout the summer. The purpose of the SMART Program is to empower children to become confident readers. The program is based on a one-on-one, 30-minute, session.
Volunteer adults and summer workers will be assigned to sit and read with their partner. The reading can be adult to child, child to adult, or partner reading.
A daily log will be updated after each session to chart progress. Children will receive two books a month from their partner readers.
If you have any questions or are interested in becoming a partner reader contact Deanie Smith at 553-3243.

Sparky's corner

Recently, I attended the Memorial Dedication in Prineville for the fallen Hot Shots who didn't survive the South Canyon Fire in Colorado. It was quite moving I must say. There were Hot Shot crews from all over, including our very own Hot Shots, who came and paid tribute to our fellow brothers and sisters who fought a good battle, but unfortunately, did not survive. Many of the parents of these fine young people spoke of their feelings...some of them have healed and others have not. The Memorial itself is truly a work of art, to say the least. If you are ever in Prineville, do yourself a favor and go visit it. The sculpture depicts wildland firefighters as they are: hardworking, proud and full of life. It was a day of mixed emotions. I saw many old friends, including my old buddy, Smokey the Bear, and new friends. Some of whom I will never see again. The next time you see one of these fine people, remember that they put their lives on the line every time they go on a wildfire. I can only hope and pray that a tragedy like this is never repeated again.
Pi-Ume-Sha weekend is just around the corner and I want to remind everyone to have a really good time, but PLEASE, BE SAFE, NOT SORRY!! And...need we say more about the Fourth of July???? Please, please, be careful with your fireworks. The grasses are pretty tall and getting drier by the day. Use only APPROVED fireworks, but think of this: the bottle rocket that goes hay-wire could start one heck of a wildland fire. With fire comes destruction—destruction of homes, trees, wildlife and sometimes human lives. Is it worth it?? If you are tempted, just think of those firefighters who may have to fight the fire that you started. What if something happened to one of them?? So PLEASE, have a fun time, but always think SAFE and be SAFE!!!! Take care 'til next time.

Sparky, the Fire Dog
