Police Department Update

The Warm Springs Police Department has always had a big turnover of employees. A major problem is salaries that are offered and budget constraints. "We are so under staffed right now that some calls go unattended," says acting chief of police Carmen Smith. "There are some shifts that only have one officer on duty to cover the whole reservation," says Smith. That makes a lot of the community members upset when officers don't respond and I don't blame them one bit

The next thing that happens is some angry community member is calling the police department demanding to know why we're not doing the job that we're getting paid to do. The officers catch it coming or going from the public or their supervisor and that's another reason sometimes why some of them quit the police department. We exhaust them to the point to where they leave to find a better paying job with fewer responsibilities. Some officers are asked to work back-to-back shifts, says Smith, "because we just don't have the man power.'

Patrol is not the only problem. We have people in dispatch and corrections that haven't had a full day off in a long time. The good news is, we are working on the budget so maybe things will start looking up. I just hope that when we do get our next chief of police, he doesn't get discouraged the first month or so in office, says Smith. If he decides to quit, we'll have to start all over again. We're hoping to get some people hired soon to fill our empty spots, says Smith. Sometimes it's hard to find people that meet all requirements. We need people with a valid driver's license, no criminal record, no arrest within a year, a high school diploma or a G.E.D. We're encouraging our young people in the Warm Springs community to apply and get a career in law enforcement, says Smith.

As of June, 1996 tribal member Avex Darrel (stoney) Miller, became the new captain of police. Miller, son of the late Avex and Dale Miller, has been involved with law enforcement since 1976 when he became an officer and was assigned to the Kah-Nee-Taresort area. Miller, also served for the Malheur County sheriff's office, for three-and-half years and another three years for Jefferson county sheriff's office before returning to Warm Springs Police Department in 1993 as a Fish and Game officer. Miller is also involved with search and rescue and has been for the past thirty years around the northwest.

Miller has several goals in mind. The number one goal is to "serve the community of Warm Springs with his expertise to the best of my ability, says Miller. I also would like to get the young community members involved with law enforcement. We need them, says Miller. "I'm also working on a program to get the community involved with a neighborhood watch." This is very important says Miller, because alot of crime goes on unreported. "It's sad because people get away with it knowing no one will turn them in. And guess who catches hell for not doing anything about it? The Police Department" says Miller. We're told that we're not doing our job. It's impossible without the help of our community because we can't be everywhere all at once, especially now that we're so short handed, says

David Allison, 34, of Madras, is the new sergeant of police here in Warm Springs. David was born in Portland to Walter and Carol Allison and was raised in the Warm Springs, Madras area. David is a graduate of Madras High class of 1981, became a police officer for the city of Madras in 1983. "I also served three years for the U.S. Air Force as a military police officer says Allison. I returned to Madras in 1989 and again became a police officer," for the city of Madras until June of 1996, when I accepted the sergeant position for the Warm Springs police department" says Allison. "My intentions as sergeant of the Warm Springs Police Department are to establish a police and community relationship" says Allison. "I want to train every officer through the Educational Service to be able to protect and serve this community on a professional basis and to the best of their ability," adds Allison. "I also want to start working closely with community members and different departments as a team minimum of 125 gpm, approximately to see if we can put a dent in some 8,900 feet of 4 inch ductile iron wanarcotic, gang, theft, vandalism and terline and a 60,000 gallon concrete alcohol-related problems," says reservoir will be received by Powell Allison. "I'm also interested in hiring Butte View Estates Water District at qualified local tribal members and the office of Type Engineering and together, with time, we can make the Surveying, Inc. 725 Hill, Bend, Or-Warm Springs Police Department a egon until 12 noon August 29, 1996 better place for the next generation," and then at said office publicly concludes Allison

Grant provides for "Chinook Trilogy" video distribution

A $5,365 grant from the James F. and Marion L. Miller Fund of the Oregon Community Foundation has enabled the Columbia River treaty tribes t distribute the critically-ac-claimed Chinook Trilogy video series and teachers' guide to each of the education service districts in Oregon. The Trilogy, which consists of three approximately 30-minute videos; a 20-page booklet with a historical chronology, maps and charts; a teachers' guide with lesson plans; and a resource list presents the tribal perspective on the dramatic decline in salmon population, treaty fishing rights and salmon restoration.

The Columbia River treaty tribes thank the Oregon Community Foundation," said Ted Strong, Executive Director of CRITFC, "The foundation has recognized the value of educating the next generation of citizens about the importance of having salmon in our rivers. This education is vital if we are to restore this magnificent resource so important to the communities of Oregon and the cultural continuity of the first Americans.

Over 260 Oregon high schools will be able to obtain copies of the Chinook Trilogy and Teachers' Guide District in their area. In addition, copies of the Trilogy were sent to the Portland Public Schools and the Salem-Keizer Public School districts. This means that, potentially, some 147,000 students per year will have the opportunity to learn about salmon, the Columbia River tribes and what can be done to save salmon. The Columbia River treaty tribes hope to secure additional funding to distribute the Trilogy to high schools, colleges and universities throughout the Northwest.

The Oregon Community Foundation, established in 1973, manages charitable funds given by individuals, families and businesses to enhance and support the quality of life in their communities. Today, the foundation's endowment consists of 355 funds with combined assets of $150 million. The Foundation makes grants through an application process that involves local citizens in the review and evaluation of requests for funds. Pre-application materials are available through the Foundation's Portland office. Individuals or businesses interested in establishing a fund may contact the Portland office at 621 SW Morrison Street, Suite 725, Portland, OR 97205.

With King's Kids

Youth witness in Hawaii, Georgia, LA

Anthony Brunoe, his cousin Jenny Langnese and sister Anna were on the road for one month with Kings Kids.

by Anthony Brunoe King's Kids is a Christian youth organization which gives kids the opportunity to witness to other people around the world. King's Kids has been around for twenty years, inviting youth of any age to join. Ages have ranged from three to seventeen. At age eighteen you become a staff member.

We applied for King's Kids near the end of the school year. We were accepted, and joined the team on June 29. We had a one-week boot camp in Hawaii. During the week we learned and rehearsed dances and mime (a skit put to music). We performed at churches, parks and amusement parks. Most of the kids we were with came from Hawaii. Only the three of us, my cousin, Jenny Langnese, my sister, Anna Brunoe, and I, and two boys from Washington state, were from here on the mainland

We flew to Georgia after boot camp. There, we attended an Olympic game. We had to ride on a crowded commuter train called Marta, into Atlanta. Most of the roads into the city had been shut down, so the train was the only way in and out. Holding on to the backpack of the person in front of us, we wandered the streets of crowded Centennial Park, which would be bombed two days later. We were a group of fifty, so staying together was very important as we moved from place to place.

We waited a half hour in line by the stadium, getting our backpacks checked by security. We then en-tered the stadium. We cheered for the U.S. as they defeated Japan in a baseball game. We then left the stadium and boarded the Marta train once again. We got off to board our bus and drive to Conyers, Georgia were we stayed for two weeks. The day in Atlanta passed quickly, but we still had another week in L.A. where we performed at Dinsneyland.

On August 2 we said our goodbyes, and went our separate ways, ending our King's Kids experience for the summer. It was exciting, and new experience for all of us. Next year, we may be gong to Africa.

Fourteen graduate from Blackjack school

On Friday, August 9, at the garden level at Indian Head Gaming Center, a total of 14 blackjack card dealer students graduated. This is the first time ever to occur at Indian Head Gaming. The graduates also performed a live audition on the blackjack tables on August 5 and 8. After 96 hours of training, instructor and Indian Head Table Games Manager, Ken Bittman proudly presented each one of the students their certificate of completion. Bittman, a native of Las Vegas, Nevada, has been involved with gaming for the past twenty years in the Nevada area. Six of those years he spent working with the tribes in the state of Washington, helping them get started. Bittman has been with Indian Head Gaming for nine weeks and enjoys being here. "I really like this area," Bittman says. Especially the people. They treat me real nice. We started with a group of 24 in the classroom," says Bittman. "Twelve were tribal members but nine dropped out for various reasons. We hope to get more locals involved the next time we decide to have more training," says Bittman. The twelve graduates will be employed at Indian Head Gaming as soon as their state licenses arrive, some full-time and some part-time, concludes Bittman.

The blackjack graduates are: Mindy Thornton, Jeff Holmes, Levi VanPelt, Betty Bagley, Anthony Shadley, Carroll Evens, Tim Watson, Linda McKelvy, Lynn Howland, Lilly DeBates, Eydie Switzler, Candido Conjero, Rena Dalebout, and Michael Baily.

Warm Springs boys attend SMILE Summer Science Camp

Three Jefferson County Middle University in Corvallis, Oregon. At School students from Warm Springs attended SMILE Summer Science Camp 1996 at Oregon State this camp they attended classes in math and science. They lived life like a college student while at Camp.

SMILE students attend Summer Science Camp at Oregon State University in Corvallis.

John DeBiaso, Jr., Joe Thompson, and Michael Martinez were three of 31 students chosen to attend this camp. There were 27 students from Oregon and 4 from Rhode Island. John DeBiaso, Jr., age 13, has been in the SMILE Program for two vears. Joe Thompson, age 13, has been in the SMILE Program for four years. Michael Martinez, also 13, has been in the SMILE Program for three years.

To attend this camp they were required to write a three-page essay on their plans for the future.

When they arrived they lived in Sackett Hall, and learned to be responsible for themselves as a college student would. By doing this they were being prepared for what college life would be like. They woke up early for classes that began at 7:30 a.m. and lasted until 4:30 p.m.

They chose what project they would like to do. Joe chose to learn Holograms, John and Mike chose to learn about Hearing and Sound Production.

Joe learned how holograms are made and what materials are needed to make them. He returned home with his hologram which was a chain and some coins

John and Mike studied different parts of the ear, they constructed a model of the ear. They also made instruments for sound production.

They did a humming experiment. People on campus hummed for five seconds for them and they estimated the amplitude and frequency for each Their math project was to find the shortest path through every state and the shortest path through the corner of every state. As part of their math classes they also learned to use HP38G calculators.

They spent hours at computer lab and had the opportunity to "surf the net." They also went into Memorial Union Book Store.

They went on various field trips as part of their classes, these included a rafting trip, which included a talk on alcohol and drugs; Agate Beach to study ocean waves; Oregon Coast Aquarium-saw Keiko; Wildlife Safari, where they saw animals from all over the world; Rock climbing and the Prehistoric Museum in Mammoth.

Other activities they participated in at the campus included bowling and billiards, SMILE Olympics, swim in Dixon Recreation Swimming Hall, an occasional movie and they participated in a talent show, just for fun, doing a lip sync.
