Billy Mills, Olympic gold medal winner in the ten K, held the Third annual Billy Mills track meet August 6, at MHS field. "With 110 youths and adults the meet was a success." Andy Leonard from the WS recreation staff "There were running events and field events according to age groups."

"Everyone received a ribbon and all were winners today," Mills said. Mills also added "Indian youths have a great opportunity to make a change around here by going to school and getting involved in sports to share their culture, strengths and heritage with other nationalities." Mills stated "the message I wanted to get across to the youths was to explore their minds also challenge the youth to find their desires, to know themselves and succeed." Mills stressed more on the positive things in stead of the negative things such as alcohol and drugs because Mills felt it were important for youths to feel good about themselves

Mill has done many such events in the past, but wants to stop and just start working with adults on grant writing skills and marketing, with his wife.

While in Warm Springs Mills toured the community and spoke with tribal members.

Candace Miller, daughter of Whitney Miller and Vesta Johnson-Miller and granddaughter of Ginger Smith, received awards at two basketball camps over the summer. The camps being Mt. Hood and Warner Pacific camps. Miller also got a good complement from a coach at one of the camps stating, "Candace has a lot of potential and can achieve much through her basketball skills." The awards were free throw and hotshot champion for both camps.

Miller has been involved in the Elks free throw contest the past three years with her best showing coming in 94, when Miller placed fourth in the state of Oregon. Miller hopes to have a stronger showing this year "My dad has been a strong influence on my basketball skills, I also play with Luther Clements' girls basketball team," stated Miller.
