HEALTHBUZZ! Community Health Education Team update

Now that 1997 has crept upon us, we're ready to take on the New Year and some of the positive changes we swore would happen! Right?

For many people, the idea to lose weight, begin an exercise program, and take better care of our health begins at the top of our list of resolutions for the New Year! Well, guess what! It's time to begin!

Getting actively involved in some type of regular physical activity does have some great health benefits. Included among these are reducing risks for heart disease, colon cancer, diabetes, and high blood pressure.

Once we become involved in "regular" physical activity, it will help us control our weight, help us develop and maintain healthy bones, muscles, and joints; and reduces the symptoms of anxiety and depression. The levels of exercise have been placed into three categories, according to the MMWR (Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report):

Regular Exercise is an activity meeting the recommendation for regular vigorous physical activity (20 minutes/day for 3 days per week), or regular sustained physical activity (30 minutes/day for 5 days per week).

Insufficient is a combination of individuals with no leisure time physical activity and those with irregular activity.

Irregular are those that do not meet the criteria for either regular sustained or regular vigorous physical activity.

Now which area would you best describe your own physical activity? If you've been living in Oregon, the information gathered indicated that only 35.7% of people who responded to the survey met the "regular" category. "Insufficient" category rated a big 64.3% for the State overall, and "Irregular" rated 43.5%.

Another category listed in MMWR was called "None", which had 20.8%.

The "Insufficient" category had the highest rate at 64.3% of respondents identified throughout the state of Oregon. What does this mean? That most people in Oregon are not regularly physically active. The survey also found that physical activity levels are particularly low among persons with less education and among older adults.

Well! What can we do about that? We can begin to honestly look at our own individual physical activity level, and choose to make a change.

Some physical activities that promote health can include such things as brisk walking, raking leaves, social dancing, washing and waxing a car, using the stairs rather than an elevator, bicycling, swimming and playing sports.

As we strive to become a healthier community, the real commitment comes as we individually make a choice for ourselves. As we learn about health, as we educate ourselves more, we allow our choices to contribute to the changes being made all around us. The benefits to everyone will be seen in our children, and the future generations to come.

1997 can be a year of positive changes. Each one of us has the choice in our hands to make the changes we know are best for us. Make this year the best year yet!

S.T.A.R.S.
 S.T.A.R.S. is a health education program that was implemented in the Jefferson County Middle School in 1996. Anson Begay, of the Tribal Community Health Education, along with several other adults from Jefferson County, was trained to assist in the health education series in 1996.

S.T.A.R.S. stands for Students Today Aren't Ready for Sex. The program trains high school students to conduct the classroom education, and uses adult facilitators to support the high school students. S.T.A.R.S. is a health education program that focuses education on Middle School students. The main concept of S.T.A.R.S. is to talk about postponing sexual involvement.

High school students meet once a week for five weeks with middle school students. During this time they share the S.T.A.R.S. presentation and work with the students to explore ways to say "NO" without hurting their friends' feelings; explore different types of pressures that influence decision about sexual involvement; and share assertive skills to use in pressured situations.

The entire S.T.A.R.S. program stresses that most kids in Jefferson County Middle School are not having sex; and high school student presenters stress their belief that it's best for students to wait or postpone sexual involvement; and that most students aren't ready to handle the consequences of sexual involvement.

Anson Begay, from the Tribal Community Health Education department, was trained to assist in the S.T.A.R.S. program in 1996. Joining Anson this year as another adult facilitator from Warm Springs, is co-worker Carolyn Wewa. Both Anson and Carolyn will be assisting high school students who will be conducting classroom sessions at Jefferson County Middle School.

The high school students that have been involved in the S.T.A.R.S. training sessions have shown a lot of maturity, and possess positive leadership skills. All the student facilitators have high commitment and belief in the S.T.A.R.S. concepts and demonstrate this in their high level of enthusiasm.

To find high school youth willing to stand up and become involved in a program that stresses postponing sexual involvement is encouraging.

The realities of life today, is that there are youth that do become sexually involved at an early age. The results of this early involvement may lead to teen pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases, and emotional problems to name a few. Peer pressure becomes a driving force behind youth making choices that may not be healthy for themselves.

S.T.A.R.S. offers middle school students a chance to hear older high school students deliver a message that may impact their choices.

If you hear your students talking about the S.T.A.R.S. program, you'll now have an idea of what that is!

EVENTS UPCOMING:
 On January 30, 1997 at 6 P.M. we will present the first of three "Family Movie Nights" which will take place at the Community Center Social Hall.

There will be a video movie shown for the whole family. There will be a snack bar on hand to serve you a light dinner. We encourage the whole family to attend and take a break from that same routine.

In coordination with the Recreation Department we have planned a "REZ REMOTE RACE" on Wednesday February 26, 1997 at 6:30 P.M.. There will be three different race courses for the participants, oval, obstacle and straight away. Along with the race courses we will have three different age groups 6-10 yrs, 11-14 yrs and 15 and up. Yes, even the adults will have a chance to show their skills.

There will be fun, laughs, certificates and PRIZES! This will take place at the Community Center inside or out weather permitting.

For more information call the C.H.E.T. at 553-4922 or stop by the Vern Jackson Home.

Seeking penpal

To the editor,
 Dear Warm Springs Tribes,
 My name is Devan Gerver. I am 11 years old and I live in Pennsylvania.

I am writing to you because I am interested in learning about Native American culture. I would like to have a penpal.

I would like to learn your language and what your children learn in school and the games they play.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Your friend,
 Devan Gerver
