The Indian Warrior, The Veterans Corner

Memorial Day Veterans Parade in

Prineville

gathered to honor all those who made the Ultimate sacrifice during war time

The parade was headed by a U.S. Marine Corp. Color Guard, followed by the local V. F. W. and the American Legion groups both men and women.

Among the visiting groups was the Northwest Indian Veterans Association (NIVA), which is based in the Portland/Vancouver area, headed by Jack Quinsy, who works with the Veterans Affairs there. The NIVA Color Guard consisted of Dan Foster, a Klamath Falls Indian who is a army veteran retired, served in the Korean and Vietnam era.. the next was Dave Smith, Navajo, served in the Vietnam War and received the Silver Star, and the Distinguished Flying Cross. He was a door gunner on Helicopters. The other was Jack Quinsy, Chippawa, from Minnesota, served in the Vietnam war.

Chosen Few group of the Korean War era was among the visitors in the Parade. Chesley drew phrase from that era. There were many other visiting groups in the first time parade in Prineville, which could develop into something great in the future.

The parade made its way through the city of Prineville, and wound up at Ochaco Park, where on the Bridge the group gathered and a wreath was thrown into the stream honoring all those who served in the Navy, Marine and Coast Guard. With the gun Volley, and Taps concluded the services there. From there the group went to the Cemetery where services were held for all who served the country.

In the parade there were a group of Vietnam Veterans who carried the U.S. Flag that flew over the Embassy in Saigon, Vietnam.

The parade and gathering in Prineville was one of many parades that was held on Memorial day across the country.

Veterans groups from far and near

There should be some kind of recognition to all those who served their country in time of hostel conditions through out the world... There should be provisions made where the Veterans have a voice in what happens on the reservation in the future. In the past there was nothing specifically spelled out for all veterans.

However the group still needs Veterans participation in addressing the needs of the veterans here in Warm Springs. There are several areas that need action and with those who were in attendance felt there should be more on hand. At the last meeting there were almost a hand full of Veterans there. There is a call but as usual the few show up. One person remarked, "I guess everyone is Ashamed to be a Veteran."

There are several issues that look real good if enough participation from the local veterans would occur. For those who attend all the meetings should be commended well for their time and efforts. The next meeting will be June 10, 1997, to evaluate what has been discussed up to now. Veterans Please attend.
