

E Coosh EEWA: The way it is

SPILYAY SPEARS

The younger set seem to be drifting off into a world of their own. There are a lot of things that happen today that the kids would never have dreamed of doing in the olden days.

In comparison of the teen of today and the teen of the past, they seems to be worlds apart. There is so much violence today than in the past. We wonder why, or what makes the big difference. I can truthfully say the, "Teen," in the past were more straight laced as compared to the teen today.

One of the things that is frightening is the use of fire arms and what causes this to happen? Well, there are several factors known to lead in this direction.

Most generally things start at home. Or they follow a leader of some sort of a gang; Maybe they pattern after heroes in TV land, or they see violence in movies, and want to act "Cool," like their leader in the gangster movie.

What can be done to help change the way of life of teenagers: The blame gets tossed around from one to another. The teachers, the towns people, the police force and finally the parents get the blame.

The blame shouldn't' be entirely to on the parents because today their hands are like tied from the laws that are set forth. If a parent tries to correct his children the first thing the parents are charged with child abuse according to the Social Services. So the parents have to face the consequences what ever they may be. At some times the teenager is placed in another home, or the parent either faces jail time or a heavy fine. So I don't believe the parents are the blame for the problem child most of the time. Because the parents are not allowed to correct their children they become that much more out of control and get out of hand even more. Sometimes people believe the laws are stupid to day.

A person wonders why kids drink and smoke a lot now days. Every time you turn on the TV set to a movie the first thing they do in the movie is get a bottle out of the cabinet, pour a drink in a glass and take a drink. Or they reach into their pocket and pull out a cigarette and smoke. It seems like they are always smoking or drinking, at parties where everyone is drinking, It does make it look challenging for the young kids of today. Drug dealers and pushers hook the teenagers because they know they are easy targets, and once hooked they do anything to get drugs from than on. In all the movies you see people shooting at others like if it were a natural thing to do. Movies with scenes where they just shoot up a joint and tear it apart. The good guys always win no matter how out numbered they are, and they live happily ever after.

I can remember when I was a Cute Little Tyke, I was raised by the book. I'm not kidding that was the best way to handle children then and should be that way today. Yep! my hind end got pretty sore at times from that book and I am not sorry that it was the book that helped my parents. I respected them more because they were trying to make me see what's right from wrong. It showed me they loved me and cared for me and wanted me to grow up to be a good guy. I never addressed my parents by there first name ever, the only thing I called them was "Mom, and Dad," and I respected everything they told me. Everyone had an even break in my family. We all had chores to do each day, the only thing my sister and I always had it out over was who washed the dishes and who dried them, but we always worked them out to where I dried them, but in the end everything was okey and we all lived happily ever after AHH-NAH-CHI-TOON!!!

"You say it was night time," bellowed the district attorney. "You were at least three blocks away, and still you saw the defendant shoot Dillingham. How far can you see at night?" "I don't know," said the witness. "How far is the moon?" YIKES

There was this lawyer who had a lawsuit involving a property title. When he walked into the courtroom, his opponent came over to him and asked, "Are those your witnesses sitting over there?" They are," he said

"Then you win," said the other lawyer, "I've used those witnesses twice myself." YIKES

Bobb creates beautiful artwork for Pi-Ume-Sha posters

Again my son, Travis R. Bobb. created a beautiful drawing for the Pi-Ume-Sha poster and Warm Springs community. I am very proud of Travis. He puts all his efforts and talents into his drawings.

For the past five years or so Travis has entered the Warm Springs Tribal Art Show at the Museum At Warm Springs. His talent and artistic ability truly shines through in all his art

We've been posting the Pi-Ume-Sha posters everywhere we go and they're being taken and removed as fast as we put them up. The posters have become trophies and keepsakes because of the beautiful artwork and drawings. Just as the Mt. Hood Jazz Festival posters have become keepsakes, so have the Pi-Ume-Sha posters due to the culture and tradition it portrays in Indian Country.

I think it would be a good gesture for the Pi-ume-sha committee to pay or reward Travis for his efforts. A lot of people make money off his drawings including the printers and T-shirt and jacket sales with the picture on them. I know Travis would ppreciate it and can use the money. This is his lifework, his art.

Last year we were packing and taking down our teepee, ready to head home when Travis was acknowledged around 9:00 p.m. Sunday night. Most of the people had gone home by then. Friends and family were disappointed because we had waited all weekend for him to be acknowledged during a day time gap in the schedule. It came like an after thought, very disappointing and sad. We need to support our talented people. Recognition and appreciation

Travis enjoys creating the drawings he presents for the posters. He looks forward to the challenge. The family doesn't get to see the finished drawing until he presents it to CK for approval. It's awesome. We've toyed with the idea of selling products, too, with the drawings on them so Travis can profit in some way too. We'll see.

I have a very talented son and I'm very proud of his contribution to the community. Congratulations Travisyou did it again. Can't wait til next

Also congratulations to all the students who graduated, especially to any of my NASU/MHS students who graduated. I'm proud of you all. Hang in there guys-education is where it's at and you can't get there on alcohol and drugs. Life is already a challenge without adding to its difficulties. I have the utmost confidence in all of you, you can do

Please return bike

To the editor,

Lost: a bike wandered off from my yard one evening we were gone. If found please return to 6640 Wolfe

One silver Huffy boy's bike. Parents, please check any bikes your kids may have brought home as of Mother's Day, May 10. The young man that the bike belonged to received it as a gift from a loving parent. I would like to think we were brought up to know not to steal from our neighbors and will help teach our children the same respect. I will continue to look for this bike, until found.

Keep up the good work!

To the editor,

I wanted to let the community know what a great job everyone is doing. I'm seeing a lot of change for the good. Many residents have cleared up area's surrounding their homes by cutting down weeds and limbing up trees, it's looking great. Keep up the good work, it will make a difference.

Also, a special pat on the back for the beautification crew that has been working in Warm Springs, its looking really good. All your hard work is

It's going to take a steady effort from everyone to keep up on top of things. All the rain is going to make

Have a good one. Happy Father's Day to our dear old pop on the 21st. It's been a challenge and a blessing in disguise throughout the year, dad, but you have all 36 of your children, grandchildren and greatgrandchildren here to say we love you very much dad. You're the number one "Rabbit" in our book.

Keep on hopping, we're glad you're here yet and for many years to come, we're here for you. To my sisters, brothers, children, grandsons, nieces and nephews: I love each and every one of you dearly. Through every crisis, we've stuck togehter as a close knit family. We've supported one another, we're truly blessed to have each other to go to whenever something comes up. Just as our own dear mother, Cecelia McKinley-Frank, said before she passed away, "Take care of one another-you're all you have." We shouldn't put others in front of family and we should stick together, hand in hand, when times get rough, it'll pass and we'll be stronger for it. I love you all. Take care, my family.
