More tips on federal benefits for veterans and (4) the person must be released under honorable conditions.

The law call for the returning veteran to be placed in the job as if the veteran had remained continuously employed instead of going on active duty. This means that the person may be entitled to benefits that are generally based on seniority, such as pensions, pay increases, promotion and transfers. The law also protects a veteran from discharge without just cause for one year from the date of reemployment, and a reservist or National Guard member from discharge without just cause for six months after returning from initial active duty for training. The law also prohibits discrimination in hiring, promotion or other advantages of employment because of one's obligation as a member of the reserve or Guard unit.

Applications for reemployment should be given, verbally or in writing, to a person authorized to represent the company for hiring purposes. A record should be kept of the application. If there are problems in attaining reemployment, the applicant may be represented by the Department of Labor.

Individuals seeking assistance should contact the department of Labor's Veterans Employment and Training Service (VETS) in the state of the employer concerned.

VETS administers the law for federal employees, including those in the Postal Service. Employees should contact their agency personnel office about rights restoration. If a job is not restored, the employee has the right to appeal to the Merit Systems Protection Board. Internet information also is available through VETS' Advisor Expert System.

Unemployment Compensation

Weekly unemployment compensation may be paid to discharged servicemembers for a limited period of time. The amount and duration of payment are governed by state laws. To apply, veterans should immediately contact their nearest state employment office after leaving military service and present a copy of their military discharge, form DD-214.

 Host Drum—Black Lake
 (Memorial tribute for Tracy Mesteth)
 Co-Host Drum—Dancing Bear

The Bitterroot Valley Good Nations Powwow was founded on November 1, 1993 to provide cultural education of Native American people.

The Good Nations Educational Program was created after the first Powwow, in response to the growing demand from local people. It addresses the need for local Native history to be shared with the general public.

It is the goal of the committee to strengthen inter-cultural relations with an appreciation for individual heritage. It is through education that we can learn respect for one another.

Apology sent

To the editor,

Trudy Thompson; I am deeply sorry for overreacting to you innocently cruising and partaking with "your ex". It's the 90's and vows are liberal now and I'm behind times. Pardon my audacity of forgetting my other bro's after you entertained my first cousin, that was unfair.

As scripture points out, "Sin has consequences that are impossible to escape. My consequences are the loss of my job at the SBDC, the loss of my business grant, family and freedom. Life sure went downhill after February 22nd this year. Again, forgive my abuse to you.

In Christ's Love
 Your husband,
 Roscoe Thompson
