Natural Resources releases final draft for '99 timber sale

The Timber Committee and Resource Management Interdisciplinary Team have released a final draft of the Warm Springs '99 Timber Sale for public review. The document was prepared by the Project Interdisciplinary Team to provide options for a timber harvest in the Summit Butte, Willow Springs, Long Ridge, Schoolie, Camas Prairie, South Fork, HeHe, Cedar Creek and Badger Butte forest planning units beginning in 1999.

Three alternatives were formulated and numerous logging methods were considered for this project, taking into account present resource conditions, forest health and public input. The sale is expected to yield approximately 64 million board feet of net timber volume.

The document is divided into sections explaining the purpose and need for action, resource-based indicators used to help the technical staff analyze and mitigate environmental impacts, and details of the three alternatives. There are maps showing the harvest blocks, quick reference tables t compare the alternatives, a list of measures needed to mitigate environment consequences, and the Project Interdisciplinary Team's recommended alternative.

The goal of Alternative A is to continue current management. Activities such as livestock grazing, hunting, recreation and cultural food gathering would continue as in the past. The only harvest proposed un-der Alternative A would be through salvage operations that remove trees killed by fire, wind, insects or other causes.

The emphasis of Alternative B is to treat stands with high and moder-ate forest health problems. Under Alternative B, 65 million board feet of timber would be harvested. Seed tree and shelterwood treatments would be prescribed for approxi-mately 1,800 acres and commercial thinning would take place on approximately 2,750 acres.

The emphasis of Alternative C is to treat stands with high and moderate forest health problems. Under Alternative C, 63 million board feet of timber would be harvested. Seed tree and shelterwood treatments would be prescribed for approxi-mately 2,000 acres and commercial thinning would take place on approximately 1,950 acres.

The alternatives would have varying impacts on water, fish, wildlife, cultural, timber, range, soil and economic resources. There would also be some changes to the transportation system, which would include eradication of unnecessary roads.

For more information or copies of the document contact Bob Gill or Rich Lohman in the Forestry Branch or call 553-2416. Tribal members have 30 days to comment on the proposed sale.

Service) between Madras and Bend/ Redmond telephone exchanges. When fully implemented, the PUC's Order No. 98-498 will allow telephone customers with Madras and Warm Springs prefixes to dial Redmond and Bend numbers without toll charges.

The Chamber began the process of receiving EAS in 1996 and in late 1997 submitted petitions with over 1,100 signatures representing local telephone customers requesting the service. While the Chamber's interest was primarily business-oriented, many residents were supportive as well. Plans were temporarily derailed, however, when in October 1997 the hearing, and organized testimony to demonstrate the community interest criteria required by the PUC. The Commission signed the order granting the EAS on December 2, 1998

Chamber President Parrish Van Wert thanked the petitioners and persons who provided testimony for the hearing, noting, "This is a great example of how the Chamber serves the community when there's a defined opportunity and interest in supporting an effort to act upon that opportunity.

Toll calls won't be eliminated right away. Phase II of the process, the rate and cost phase, is not due for

IRS take taxation out of grantmaking

The Internal Revenue Service has affirmed the tax-exempt status of tribal governments and corporations created under tribal law, a status that has been clear in principle but clouded in practice due to the ambiguous interpretations of IRS reviews and foundation program officers.

"This is the go-ahead grantmakers and tribes alike have been waiting for." said Rebecca Adamson, President of First Nations Development Institute in Fredericksburg, VA. "Tribes can now dedicate assets to charitable purposes without subjecting tribal assets to state oversight. As for private foundations, they can now rest assured that direct grants to tribal governments for charitable and public purposes will qualify toward their minimum distribution required by law, and the foundation will not have to exercise expenditure responsibility over the grant."

She urged Indian people not to be put off by the intricate details of tax law, but to make the case with foundations for direct grants to tribal governments and corporations created under tribal law. "Unless they hear from us, foundations may be slow to adopt a new mode of grantmaking despite the IRS informational letters of September 8." Tribes that have considered endowing assets for the benefit of Indian people in perpetuity can only be encouraged by the IRS letters, she added.

Adamson requested the clairifications in an initial meeting with officials from the IRS, the Treasury Department and the Council on Foundations, as well as consulting tax attorney Kathleen Nilles of Gardner, Carton & Douglas. First Nations was responding to ambiguities in IRS treatment of direct grants to tribal governments and corporations created under tribal law.
