Gulf War Veterans Information on Benefits

Gulf War Veterans' Information to Benefits

Overview

While each wartime era is distinct, once their careers in uniform end Americans have similar needs. That veterans leaving service needs a job and medical care. Above all, veterans need assurances the government that sent them in harm's way will not betray the covenant between the leaders and the led. After all, those who serve honorably have a right to expect the government to respond in kind. With the support of The American Legion, Congress has enacted laws providing benefits and compensation for veterans. For example, historians recognize the leading role played by The American Legion in prodding Congress to pass the original GI Bill in 1944.

After every war this century, Legionaries fought to secure healthcare and compensation for veterans exposed to environmental hazards, from chemical weapons to battlefield trauma. Three million members of The American Legion, 53,000 of whom are Gulf War veterans, are dedicated to make sure that Gulf War veterans know about the benefits they earned by serving their nation. Joining The American Legion means that you are not alone. You will be part of a community of veterans who share this forum.

Legion Services For Gulf War Veterans

Temporary Financial Assistance (TFA)

An integral part of our Family Support Network, TFA has provided hundreds of thousands of dollars in grants to needy Gulf War veterans and their families. The grants are typically used to provide a temporary financial boost during a crisis or to help families who have a disabled Gulf War veteran in the household. Veterans who have received TFA also receive follow-up contacts from the Legion to see how the family is doing. Additional assistance will be provided if warranted.

Economic Impact Study

One out of five service members in the Gulf War was a mobilized Reservist or member of the National Guard. The American Legion has helped thousands of these individuals during their return to civilian life. In many cases, however, mobilization has had a lingering negative impact. The American Legion is studying the financial impact of mobilization on the lives of these veterans. The findings will help shape changes in our laws regulating mobilization so Gulf War veterans will receive the transition benefits they need, and those mobilized in future conflicts will have a stronger safety net in place when they return.

VA's Gulf War Expert Scientific Committee

The American Legion is represented on VA's Gulf War Expert Scientific Committee, a group of medical and scientific experts from inside and outside government. The committee examines all aspects of patient care, analyzes possible medical diagnoses and provides medical consultation to VA. The American Legion has been effective advocate for Gulf War veterans in Several issues of these publications have been dedicated to Gulf War veterans. Future issues will continue to address issues of concern to Gulf War veterans, their families and their advocates.

Coalition Veterans

The Legion is in close contact with a number of veterans' groups in the United Kingdom of Canada.

Oversight of Scientific and Medical Studies

The American Legion is consulting with the University of Connecticut in the oversight of more than 100 research studies being conducted by government and private institutions on Gulf War illness.

Service Officers

The American Legion has accredited service officers across the country who, free of charge, help veterans apply for VA benefits. To contact your local service officer call 800-433-3318.

Apologies sent to family & relatives

To the editor,

To my family and relatives: My apologies for not being here to say good-bye to my precious nephew, who was like a son to me. He meant so much to us, and to lose him this way makes the pain even worse. Especially the way this homeless person found out (2 1/2 months later) about my loss and my family's heartbreak. They had no way to reach me, to contact me to let me know. I was on the streets, living my alcoholic life.

I was in treatment last year, relapsed after six months of sobriety. Found all kinds of reasons to blame everyone. For not being here for the funeral, I can blame no one but myself for not keeping in contact. The alcoholic's life is a selfish, irresponsible life.

I have since gotten a job as a caretaker for a good friend I met at NARA. Hopefully with the death of my beloved nephew to open my eyes and make me feel the pain of life. I can stay sober and give some meaning to this person's life.

To you young people in my family, please don't follow in my footsteps on the road to hell. It's a hard, lonely life.

May the great Spirit bless my family & relatives and relieve some of the hurt caused by the loss of our loved one, Stacey Marcus Lillie.

With love & prayers,
Donna Foster

"It only seems fitting that today we celebrate the living men and women who put their lives on the line to serve our country."

Salem: On the eve of Memorial Day weekend the Oregon Senate honored the men and women who have protected America's freedom.

"It only seems fitting that today we celebrate the living men and women who put their lives on the line to serve our country," Senator Charles Starr (R-Hillsboro) stated. "As we remember those who gave their life protecting our nation, we should also think this weekend of those among us who fought to protect our freedom."

The proposal, Senate Bill 831, honors disabled veterans who have served the country by providing them greater opportunities for employment in public sector jobs.

"This is about providing opportunity to the men and women who have courageously served in America's armed forces," Starr continued. "It is the least we can do for the time they have given to our country."

The bill recognizes individuals who have served America since 1976. The proposal now heads to the Oregon House for approval.
