Tribe to canoe 111 miles on Columbia River

The Puyallup Tribe's Spilyapabs Canoe Family will return the cedar canoe tradition to the Columbia River during the Paddle to Pendleton July 29 to August 6. They will paddle a 111 mile stretch of the Columbia River during the Paddle to Pendleton July 29 to August 6. They will paddle an 111-mile stretch of the Columbia River from Celilo Village to Wallula Junction on their way to Huckleberry Feast at Indian Lake on the Umatilla Reservation. This will mark the first time in about 70 years that cedar canoes have journeyed on the Columbia.

"We are very excited about bringing our canoe and the tradition it carries to the Columbia River," says Connie McCloud Cultural Coordinator of the Puyallup Tribal Health Authority and Captain of the Spilyapabs Canoe Family. The Spilyapabs Canoe Family seeks to return to others the support and teachings of the canoe that were offered to us as we began retracing the path of our ancestors; and to maintain a safe, healthy, drug and alcohol free environment for our youth, families and community. It is our intent to offer a meaningful cultural and spiritual journey for all whom join us."

The Paddle to Pendleton follows a renewed and growing tradition of Cedar Canoe Cultures. Beginning in 1989 with the Paddle to Seattle (from LaPush), to the 1993 Paddle to Bella Bella, to the 1995 and 1996 Full Circle Paddle, 1997 Tribal Journeys/Paddle to LaPush, 1998 Power Paddle to Puyallup and the 1999 Paddle to Ahouset.

Other canoe groups from Western Washington and Canada are expected to join after the Tribal Journeys "in the Spirit of Our Ancestors" paddle ends on July 30th from Vancouver Island.

The Paddle to Pendleton will also coincide with the Jammin' for Salmon concert at the Wild Horse Casino on Friday, August 4th. Following is the schedule of the canoes and approximate times

- July 30 - Day in Celilo

Seeking adults for leadership opportunities

The American Indian Scouting Association will hold its 43rd annual seminar for youth and adults at the South Dakota Schools of Mines and Technology, in Rapid City, SC, July 22-26. The hosts will be the Oglala Sioux Tribe.

Participants will include both Indian and non-Indian youth (ages 12-17) and adults, who explore strategies for youth development and improvement of life in Indian in Indian communities through Girl and Boy Scouting programs and services.

Participants will share tribal traditions through native dress, dancing, music, and sports. Our exciting tour in the heart of the Black Hills will include a visit to the Crazy Horse Memorial and Mt. Rushmore.

A highlight of the seminar is the awarding of the national Joseph T. Provost Youth Award and the Francis X. Guardipee Grey Wolf Award, which recognizes distinguished service to Indian youth.

Workshops will be available to assist adults responsible for leadership and administration of youth programs by providing training and a forum for the exchange of ideas.

AISA is a collaboration between Indian tribal leaders, and two of our nation's leading youth agencies—Girl Scouts of the USA and Boy Scouts of America.

This national organization was formed to provide training for adults and leadership opportunities for American Indian youth.

The American Indian Scouting Association seeks to enable American Indian Youth to develop their talents and capabilities so they will be able to maintain their cultural identities while building bridges which will allow them to be successful and productive members of both societies.

The fee for the seminar is $145 for adults and youth. After June 26 the fee will increase by $20. This fee includes room and board and membership. Funds are available for Youth Scholarship Grants, based on financial need.

Domestic violence must stop

How are we to stop Domestic Violence? If it happens and keeps happening and no one steps in to intervene, then we cannot stop domestic violence. Domestic violence is all about control and power. The person who wants control or power does not like himself very well (or in rare cases, the female is the abuser, doesn't like herself too well). Domestic violence is trying to make someone do something that the man wants done from blocking doorways, turning on light in the middle of the night and taking blankets off the bed, are ways to try and make the woman talk or "work things out". This is very unhealthy and very unacceptable behavior. Once a man hits, he will always hit. This very sad, very true though.

The abusive person usually grew up in a very unhealthy, dysfunctional environment. This type of behavior pattern is extremely hard to break. I do not think many people or even counselors realize how hard these issues can be to deal with. Not many people who were abused as children deal with their issues and let them go. They are in complete denial about the whole situation. The way this type of person reacts to things can give a hint as to where the person is coming from or what the person has gone through. This person takes everything personally. From comments on who abused them or family members in general.

Even if the family members are unhealthy (abusing alcohol, not taking care of themselves) the truth of the matter is that everyone needs to be responsible for him or her. They need to take care of their disease, treat their alcoholism, deal with their issues and then begin life. Get a job, take care of their total well-being. No one should have to foot the bill for someone who is drinking. It is very disrespectful to be under the influence and show up at family's houses or in-laws houses. No one should have to feed someone who is under the influence because he or she is hungry and not relying on himself to get a job and feed his own self. For those of you that are in a relationship with another person who doesn't use, be respectful to that person and don't let your relatives, whether it is, brother, sister, cousin, friend, intrude upon your home. No one should have to deal with your relatives shortcomings. Especially your spouse or significant other. Lets open our eyes to the many unhealthy habits of dysfunctional, alcoholic family!
