Warm Springs Forestry sends technicians to Northern Pueblos Agency to help

To the editor,

During Los Alamos, New Mexico's highly publicized Cerro Grande Fire, more than Private and Public lands burned. Tribal lands belonging to San Ildefonso and Santa Clara Pueblos were also impacted. In the aftermath of a large wildfire, one can truly contemplate the might that is Mother Nature. Intense firestorms, driven by high winds, engulfed most vegetation and surface fields, save but for a few scattered islands of green trees. Thousands of blackened stems now dominate the landscape-frozen in silence: remains of what was once timbered canyon lands. Even in the midst of perceived devastation, the forest's temporary slumber is broken by the dove's call; one of the first signs of nature's resiliency

From an economic perspective. two post-fire options remained. Either do nothing or salvage poten-tially lost timber revenues. Both Pueblos decided to go forward with salvage sales. Unfortunately, local forestry staff lacked intensive experience in producing a large-scale salvage safe in a timely and efficient manner. A call for help was then issued by the Northern Pueblos Agency seeking technical assistance from Western Tribes. The Warm Springs Agency was the one and only forestry organization to respond by supplying the aid of three Forest Technicians and myself.

Over a two-week period, nearly 2,000 acres of forestland was surveyed and evaluated much of which was subsequently readied for salvage. Primary duties included reconning, lving out treatment boundaries, marketing and cruising timber. Pri-mary duties included enduring adverse terrain and weather, along coping with the occasional snake. Although of the non-poisonous variety, encountering a harmless bull snake is a heart wrenching experience when one expects a rattlesnake under every stone. However, most impressively, was coping with thunderstorms and lightning, something that is best appreciated atop a butte at over 8,000 feet above sea level. Many prayers and unspoken consequences were minded as the thunder roared and lightening sought the path of least resistance. Overall, the mission was accomplished without the slightest hint of complaint or regret. Therefore, most humble thanks go out to three Warm Springs tribal members, Leslie "Wally" Bill, Lincoln "Jay" Suppah and Edward "Hot Dog" Heath. You three individuals bravely answered the call of duty, putting aside fears of the unknown to explore an ancient and strange land. Again, thank you for helping my people and strengthening intertribal relations. You honor your people and your families. May the Good Lord above greatly bless you and yours. One day, Southern sons will be names in your honor, Hey-Yah!

This year the Native American Unity Youth Conference was held in Seattle, WA where four youth from Warm Springs and Madras attended. The goal for the youth was to obtain some ideas from other Native American Youth Councils around the Nation, and bring these ideas back to Warm Springs, so that the youth could start a youth council of their own. The youth also wanted to learn new leadership skills so they would be able to run a good strong program when they returned. While there, the youth attended sessions on how other youth councils spent a few months learning about their own Tribal Government, sessions on how alcohol and drugs affect pregnant woman and also a formal dinner where many positive role models spoke to the youth that where attending the Native American Unity Conference.

Warm Springs youth consisted of Gladys Graybael, Eric Miller and Poncho Pedraza. There was also a youth member who graduated from Madras High School last year and is now attending Oregon State University. Her name April Hornbuckle. although she is not a member of the Tribe, she is working with Victims of Crime Services this summer, and decided this Conference would be a great opportunity to understand tribal government and how it operates.

April Hornbuckle stated that she really did not know what to expect and what she would get out of the Native American Conference. But as soon as she got there it really opened her eyes as to what the youth around the nation were trying to do to stop all the negative things that were going on with today's youth on Reservations. She said she had no idea things were getting this bad and that she would try her hardest to help out the youth back at the Warm Springs Reservation.

Gladys Graybael who is a Senior Riverside High School and Eric Miller who is a Sophomore at Madras High School, wanted the youth to know that Unity is a good leadership conference to go to, and not only do you meet new people, but you also have the privilege of learning how to be a good leader. They also stated that this conference is a good way to learn how to help out your own community, and it would be neat if more youth would get involved. The conference not only showed that there is more to life than drinking and drugs. But a way to be a positive youth. They would like to encourage all of the youth including youngsters to get involved and make our Reservation a place to be proud of. Poncho Pedraza who is also a sophomore at Madras High School said the conference was a lot of fun and he learned things about other tribes around the Nation that he never knew before.

Overall, the rip to Seattle for the Native American Unity Youth Con-ference went very well. The Youth that attended learned a lot and would like the community to know that there are youth out there that do care about what is going on with the youth today and will try very hard to make some positive changes in this community. This group of youth not only went to the Conference, but has also started participating in other community events, such as the Pi-Ume-Sha parade in Warm Springs. This is just the beginning of all the positive things that will come from these youth. Soon this group of youth will be starting a council. They will also be helping Victims of Crime Services with the Inner Tube event that they will be putting on for the younger children in the community.

If anyone would like to help out Victims of Crime Services and Fire & Safety clean the river on Wednesday, the 26th prior to the Inner Tube event which will be on the 29th, please call VOC at 553-2293. We would also like to encourage all youth who would like to be part of the new youth council to feel free to contact the same number.
