The data on juvenile crime show that the peak hours for violent crimes are from 3 to 8 p.m. About 24 million school age children need care while their parents are at work.

Experts say that nearly 5 million school age children spend some time without adult supervision during a typical week.

New school building proposal made by tribes and 509-J

A long-term plan for Warm Springs Elementary School has been brought back onto the table for discussion.

The Comprehensive Plan drafted in 1988 included plans for a new school building to be located off of Hollywood Blvd. But, because of the water in that area the plans were shifted for the school to be located near the Health & Wellness Center and Early Childhood Center where the new road will connect to Hollywood Boulevard.

In that wet area it would cost more money to fill that in with a solid foundation.

Following this plan the Early Childhood Education Center and Health and Wellness Center are built in the areas planned for them according to the Comprehensive Plans drafted in 1988.

This new school building will have twenty-four classrooms and will hold approximately 100 students per grade level up to the fifth grade level. Students will be in the sixth grade before they attend Jefferson County Middle School where the enrollment is close to 900 students.

Warm Springs has the oldest school building in the 509-J School District.

With a possibility of a referendum in progress the Warm Springs Elementary School could have a new building in a new location with a larger capacity.

The Tribes would build this new school building with a $5 million loan reworked by the hydro project. Because the 509-J School District will operate the school they will also pay a lease to assist in payment of the loan.

The School District will assist in selection of the architect and will work closely with the Tribes on this project.

Tribal Council will hold another meeting and possibly set a date for a referendum for Tribal Members to vote.
