

Language law

Arlita Rhoan, lead language instructor at the Warm Springs Culture and Heritage Department, and Hamilton Greeley, media specialist working with the department, recently presented a framed and signed copy of Senate Bill 690 to the Tribal Council. The bill, passed by the Legislature this year and signed by the governor, allows tribal members meeting language fluency criteria to receive a special state teaching license. During the Legislative session, more than 30 tribal members, most from the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, testified in favor of the new law. Greeley had the document, including the pen the governor used to sign it, framed.

New corporate board forming

Non-profit Community Development Corp. to have 7-member board

Board members are needed to serve on a new tribal corporation dedicated exclusively to charitable, religious, educational and scientific purposes.

The Warm Springs Community Development Corporation is a non-profit corporation, organized under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The board of directors will include a total of seven members.

One director will represent the Agency District, one director will represent the Seekseequa District, and one will represent the Simnasho District.

The Secretary-Treasurer of the Tribal Council and the Chief Operating Officer of the Tribe, or their designees, shall also be directors.

In addition, two directors shall be "at large," meaning they can be either tribal members or non-tribal members.

The name, designation and date of expiration of the initial term of each initial director will be determined by Tribal Council.

Voters of each District shall select the successor director from their district; the Tribal Council shall select other successor directors; and the Secretary-Treasurer and Chief Operating Officer or their designees shall serve while they hold those positions or their designees shall serve at the pleasure of the officer appointing them.

Letters of Interest and Resumes of applicants interested in serving on the Board of Directors should be submitted to the following address by no later than Friday, October 26, 2001:

TRIBAL COUNCIL OFFICE
P.O. Box 1299
Warm Springs, OR 97761

An authorization letter will be mailed to all applicants for a background check to be completed by the Warm Springs Police Department, the report from which will be submitted confidentially to the Secretary-Treasurer.

COCC offers free preparatory session

Central Oregon Community College is offering a session to help incoming students prepare for winter term. A placement test and "Next Steps" orientation program will be offered at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 23, at the North Campus in Redmond.

The two-hour ASSET placement test measures current skills in reading, writing and math and is used to determine the correct level of course work. It is required for students who intend to pursue a college degree or certificate, and for those planning to enroll in math, writing, or other courses requiring placement scores for registration. Results are available after the Next Steps session.

The one-hour "Next Steps" session, which follows the placement test, offers an orientation to the college and some helpful hints about planning a course of study. The session is mandatory for all new students who plan to earn a degree or certificate.

There is no charge for these services, but reservations are required. For more information about times and locations or to reserve a seat, contact the COCC Counseling office at 383-7515. To register online, access <http://www.cocc.edu/admit/ptest.htm>.

Anyone wishing to attend this event who has special needs resulting from a physical disability should contact Gene Zinkgraf, ADA coordinator, at least three days in advance of the event. He can be reached at 383-7775 or through the college's TTY number, 383-7708.

Massage class now being offered

Central Oregon Community College's Community Education department is offering "The Art of Massage" from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 20.

In addition to learning basic massage techniques for soothing tired muscles and reducing stress, instructor Frances Berezo will teach participants the benefits of massage, general anatomy and ways to offer safe, nurturing touch.

The cost of the class is $28. Although the class is not for couples only, a partner is required.

For information, or to register, call 383-7270 or e-mail <http://www.cocc.edu/ce>.

New GED testing to start in 2002

The Oregon State Board of Education has announced new General Educational Development (GED) tests starting in January 2002. The new tests are designed to incorporate up-to-date, widely used curriculum standards and standardized assessment practices available.

Oregonians currently working toward their GED certificate have until Dec. 31, 2001, to successfully complete the current GED test series.

After the new tests are released in January 2002, any candidate who has not successfully completed the current GED test battery must start again with the 2002 series and pay a new testing fee to qualify for an Oregon certificate.

The new tests will make greater use of "authentic" materials, such as editorial cartoons, graphs of economic data and business memoranda, requiring candidates to process information in several disciplines simultaneously. In addition, the new tests require the use of a calculator on half of the mathematics test.

Although the new tests will continue to emphasize language arts, reading and writing, mathematics, science and social studies, they will have a greater emphasis on history, civics, government, health as well as environmental and space science.

Central Oregon Community College offers GED instruction at all of its College Centers. Call 504-2950 for information.

Since the GED's beginning in 1944, Oregon has issued 211,170 certificates. Last year 9,156 Oregonians earned GED credentials.
