

Students host veterans

The Jefferson County Middle School hosted a Veterans Day assembly and parade last week.

Three of the speakers at the assembly were Warm Springs tribal member veterans, Larson Kalama, Ross Kalama and Claud Smith Sr.

The veterans answered questions from the students, and recounted some of their war experiences.

Composite Products sees bright future for Tectonite

Allan Earnest, Jacob Coochise, and Jim Mehlberg recently traveled to Baltimore, Maryland, to participate in the Annual Door and Hardware Institute Convention and Exposition.

This is the third consecutive year that representatives of Warm Springs Composite Products (WSCP) have participated in this convention, by displaying products and services for the fire door industry.

Participating in this event gives WSCP a chance to promote their product, Tectonite, as the best choice of high-density material used in the construction of 60 and 90 minute fire doors, for both Flush and Stile and Rail door construction.

For this year's show, a big display item was smaller scale versions of fire rated stile and rail doors that have recently been certified.

The fire rated stile and rail door market is now another potential opportunity for WSCP to explore in order to increase sales in the future. These types of doors are considered to be very high-end doors.

There is a very limited number of companies that are certified for fire rated stile and rail door construction, and Tectonite is one of the few products that can be used in this construction type fire rated fire doors.

According to Plant Manager Jim Mehlberg, "This convention serves a number of different purposes. It allows us the opportunity to present other services that we can offer to our current customers, the ability to further market our Tectonite material to prospective customers and also offer the opportunity for our staff to become more familiar with the fire door industry in general."

The DH I show, this year marking its 26th anniversary, is one of the largest door and hardware shows in the U.S.

There are exhibitors and attendees from all over the world that attend this show annually. According to WSCP they are hoping that the Tectonite they have made many contacts with companies both in the US and overseas.

Most of WSCP sales are in the U.S., but by exhibiting at these types of shows they are hoping that Tectonite will be a well-known name in the fire door market both domestically and internationally.

Since returning from the convention, they have been busy sending information and samples to all the contacts that were made.
