Circle of Life

Suddenly living alone off the reservation can bring a kind of culture shock, said George.

All too often, the victim then decides to return to the abusive home. This starts the abuse cycle again.

Another important reason why the facility is needed: Domestic violence is often passed down through generations. This is another cycle that victims advocates are trying to break. The Circle of Life transitional housing project is one means of accomplishing this goal.

The Confederated Tribes Victims of Crime Services is a division of the Public Safety Branch.

Staff of the Victims of Crime includes director Calica, advocates Gloria Martinez and Sarah Frank; investigator Barbara Odoms; services coordinator and advocate Gwen George; and prosecutor Nancy Sampson.

The budget for Victims of Crime Services comes mainly from the Department of Justice. Victims of Crime can be reached at 553-2293.

Graduation banquet June 25

The annual graduation banquet for tribal members is set for June 25 at the Agency Longhouse.

The banquet is for high school, college and vocational/technical/GED graduates, their family members and the community.

The event is a dinner and special recognition of tribal member accomplishments in receiving their diplomas, degrees or certificates.

The dinner is at 5:30 p.m., and the recognition and gift presentation starts at 7 p.m.

Recent graduates are asked to please forward a copy of your diploma and graduation announcement to the Tribal Education Committee.

The committee is requesting a copy of awards and special recognition that a student may have received for exceptional achievements in academics and sports.

These accomplishments may include: Honor Role, National Honor Society, FFA, Sports, Scholarship Awards, etc., while obtaining their High School diploma, College Degree, or Certificate.

The accomplishments will be recognized at the graduation banquet.

The committee requests that this information to be sent to: Tribal Education Secretary, C/O Tribal Council, PO Box C, Warm Springs, Oregon 97761, on or by June 14.

Please call the Tribal Education Secretary at 553-3258 for further information. It is important to receive this information by the student or family member in order to recognize, honor, and celebrate their accomplishments.
