Interesting story to lake celebration logo

Lake Billy Chinook Day has a unique emblem, with meaning to all of the different parts of the drawing.

Paul Patton, of Oregon State Parks, provided an explanation of the meaning of the emblem.

First, the human figure on the emblem is standing in water. The water is represented by three wavy lines, which is a technique used in Native American rock drawings.

The emblem, in fact, was developed by a Native American woman from back east.

By standing in water, the human is representing an interactive relationship with nature, said Patton.

In the water is a fish, representing fish and wildlife.

The three lines below the figures arm are the three rivers that flow into Lake Billy Chinook: the Deschutes, Metolius and Crook rivers.

The way the lines are arranged in the drawing reflects in a simple form the geographic configuration of the rivers as they enter the lake.

The sun above the human figure has three rays, also representing the three branches of Lake Billy Chinook, said Patton.

The human figure has three fingers raised on his right hand, representing the three main cultures of the region: Native American, Hispanic and white.

And the three fingers on the left hand represent the three tribes of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs.

Lake Billy Chinook Day happens this Saturday

The Lake Billy Chinook Day celebration and cleanup is this Saturday, Sept. 21. The Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, Portland General Electric and the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department are the primary sponsors of this annual event.

This year, participants in Lake Billy Chinook Day will have an extra project to consider: They will have the choice of cleaning up around the lake, or they can lend a helping hand to residents of the neighboring Three Rivers area, which was ravaged by a wildfire earlier this summer.

The work at Three Rivers will include erosion control near the Metolius River.

For the seventh year, Lake Billy Chinook Day is a part of the worldwide cleanup effort coordinated by "Clean Up The World," based in Sydney, Australia.

Clean Up The World provides organizational support and promotion for hundreds of cleanup events and activities around the globe, and is affiliated with the United Nations Environment Program.

"This affiliation is appropriate and symbolic," said Warren R. Clements, director of the Warm Springs Tribal Relations.

"Lake Billy Chinook Day is a time for all of us to come together, gain knowledge and make a positive impact on our water and lands," said Clements.

The day's celebration will include the 2002 Oregon Archaeology Celebration's first annual "Pleistocene Games," an activity featuring competition in three early-American life-skills, said Paul Patton, of Oregon Parks and Recreation.

Volunteering for cleanup duty is not required of visitors interested in the day's afternoon activities, including a free lake cruise aboard The Chinook tour boat.

Space on the boat is limited, so people interested in the tour (from 1 to 3 p.m.) are encouraged to call 546-3412 to reserve seats.

As in past years, other event activities will include flint napping demonstrations, a High Desert Museum live birds-of-prey program, a performance by the Quartz Creek Dancers and Drummers of the Confederated Tribes. The second-annual kayak sprint race is also on the agenda.

Volunteer registration for the cleanup begins at 7:30 a.m. on Saturday at the Cove Palisades State Park. Groups may register for cleanup duty by calling 546-3412.

Along with the Confederated Tribes, PGE and Oregon Parks and Recreation, other sponsors of Lake Billy Chinook Day include:

The Museum at Warm Springs, and Warm Springs Power Enterprises; the Crooked River National Grassland, managed by the U.S. Forest Service; BLM and the Jefferson County Chamber of Commerce; the sheriff's department and EMS; Seaswirl Boats; SOLV; the Archaeological Society of Central Oregon; Earth20; the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry; the State Historic Preservation Office; the Oregon Eagle Foundation; Sign Pro; and the Telephone Pioneers of America. Budget: District meetings planned for October

The weak wholesale market for electricity this year has been a main factor in why the tribal government budget is facing a significant drop in revenue: Warm Springs Power Enterprises provides a large percentage of the overall revenue. Timber revenue meanwhile is continuing its steady 10-year decline.

The need for new revenue is the main reason why the Confederated Tribes are diligently pursuing development of a new casino at the Columbia Gorge.

Earlier this month, the heads of the various tribal departments and branches presented two budget scenarios to Tribal Council. The first scenario was based on a 5-percent reduction for 2003. The second was based on a 10-percent reduction.

A draft budget will be posted in October, after which time the council and other tribal officials will conduct district meetings with tribal members. This will be the opportunity for the tribal membership to comment on the proposed budget. There will also be one or more general council meetings on the proposal. A final recommended budget will be presented in November to Tribal Council, which will make the appropriation later in the month.

This was the second structure fire in recent weeks in Warm Springs. (See photograph below.)

Police believe the two incidents are not related.

The trailer fire may have been started by fireworks.

The trailer was located at 2354 Oitz Loop, in the trailer courts area of Warm Springs.

As of earlier this week, police had not yet determined who owned the trailer.
