The Confederated Tribes in February were again well represented at the annual Eagle Watch event.

The cold weather did not stop the Quartz Creek drummers and dancers from demonstrating their talents for those who gathered for Eagle Watch 2003.

The event is a celebration of bald eagles and other raptors that live at Lake Billy Chinook.

"Eagle Watch serves as a way for all people to better understand the majesty of the eagle," said Rudy Clements, who was master of ceremonies of the tribal performance.

The main gathering place for Eagle Watch is the Round Butte Overlook Park, where the photographs on this page were taken.

Besides the Confederated Tribes, other sponsors of Eagle Watch are the Oregon Eagle Foundation, the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, and Oregon State University.

Also: The U.S. Department of Fish and Wildlife, the Culver Community Improvement Group, the Audubon Society, and Earth20 help with the event.
