Tribes discuss gaming with senators

Leaders of the Indian gribes of Oregon, including representatives of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, met this week with Sen. John McCain of Arizona, and Sen. Ron Wyden and Sen. Gordon Smith of Oregon.

Sen. McCain is chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs. Representing the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs at the meeting were Council Chairman Ron Suppah, Paiute Chief Joe Moses, Warm Springs Chief Delvis Heath, and Councilman Reuben Henry.

McCain told the delegation that he intends to proceed with legislation putting new restrictions on tribal casinos. He told the tribal officials that he wants stricter financial oversight of tribal casinos.

McCain said he wants to keep tribes from building new offreservation casinos in urban areas. However, he said it is too early to say whether legislation on tribal gambling, which he has not yet formally introduced, would affect the Cascade Locks plan, which has the support of Gov. Ted Kulongoski, the community of Cascade Locks, and Hood River County.

Show features stories by students

By Brian Mortensen Spilyay Tymoo

"When I was looking for someone to turn me back into a human later, I saw a house that said, Books for sale."

Rick Suppah methodically read the last lines of his Halloween-themed story into the microphone, yet with a conviction knowing that his story was going to be on the radio later in the week.

Suppah, a third-grader, was one of 10 Warm Springs Elementary School students picked to read stories they wrote for broadcast on KWSO radio. Sue Matters and Will "The Wilman" Robbins recorded the students at the school Monday afternoon.

"The kids were very excited," said Dawn Smith, school principal.

"I walked in and I asked the owner, 'Do you have any books that can turn me back into a human?' Yes, I looked all night long and finally found it."

The stories are being broadcast as part of Matters' and Robbins' "Morning Routine" show weekday mornings on KWSO, and on the "Homefire" program, which features local musicians, songs and spoken Kandace Hoptowit, a student at Warm Springs Elementary School, reads her story, "Why I Like School," for KWSO personality Will "The Wilman" Robbins Monday. Hoptowit's story, along with those written by nine other Warm Springs students, are being broadcast on KWSO.

recordings. The "Homefire" program is broadcast at 7 p.m. Sundays and re-broadcast at 9 p.m. Thursdays.

The kids wrote stories on Halloween, which will be used this week in anticipation of Halloween next week. They also wrote stories on why they like

"Kids love to be on the radio," Robbins said. "I think it connects the kids to the community."

"Our goal is to recognize some of the great work kids do, and to show how capably they can write," KWSO station manager Sue Matters said. "In broadcasting their readings, it's like publishing their work, and we'll encourage them to write

The program came about when Matters and KWSO contacted Smith at the beginning of the year with a standing offer to record kids reading stories and poems they had written.

On Halloween

The Warm Springs Commodities Food Program encourages all kids and adults to stop by the program and show off their costumes on Halloween day.

Commodities will be handing out candy to those individuals dressed up, and serving up some real spooky "commodity" apple cider (while supplies last).
