This weekend marks the Thirty-Seventh Annual Pi-Ume-Sha Treaty Days Celebration. Traditionally, the powwow – one of the biggest in the Northwest – happens on the last weekend in June: this year the dates are this Friday through Sunday, June 23-25.
The powwow is a celebration of tribal sovereignty, as the end of June was the time of year when the tribes of the Columbia agreed to the Treaty of 1855, establishing the Warm Springs Reservation.
Pi-Ume-Sha also honors veterans. The first Pi-Ume-Sha Powwow happened in 1969, during the Vietnam War, when many tribal members were serving tours of duty. The powwow in recent years has been a time to express appreciation to the tribal members today who are serving in the armed forces during a time of war.
