

High Looke Lodge providing individual care

By Dave McMechan
Spilyay Tymoo

High Looke Lodge provides its residents with their own private rooms, personal care, meals that the residents help to plan, and activities to stay healthy.

Gardening is a favorite part of the day for some of the residents. They grow flowers and some vegetables.

During the summer, the lodge hosts barbecues for the residents and their families.

An activities coordinator leads some residents in light work-outs, and walking is a favorite pastime. Residents at High Looke are free to come and go any time of day.

Playing bingo and watching movies are also popular activities, said lodge director Lawrence Macy.

Macy directs a staff of 18 employees at the lodge, who take care of the 14 residents, and maintain the lodge. Staff is on hand at the lodge around the clock. A registered nurse works there 30 hours per week.

Staff includes an assistant director, two cooks, maintenance workers, and the caregivers, who make up most of the lodge employees.

The cooks work from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. on alternate days. The residents meet to decide what items they would like to see on the menu.

During the year, on average there are 18 people living at High Looke. Half are members of the Confederated Tribes, and others are members of different tribes, and some non-Indians.

High Looke is a large building, totaling 40,000 square feet, and the lodge has capacity to serve more seniors.

High Looke is funded by the tribes, and partly by the state Senior Services, as the lodge is a state certified assisted living facility.

High Looke has been open for about seven years.

The lodge, located at 2321 Ollalie Lane, can be reached at 553-1182.
