Indigenous Peoples program offers financial planning scholarship

The Social Investment Forum Foundation is a national nonprofit organization that conducts research and educational outreach to advance socially and environmentally responsible investing.

The foundation's Indigenous Peoples' program seeks to address the cultural disconnect between Native and non-Native peoples, specifically in the area of socially and environmentally responsible investing.

In 2008 the Social Investment Forum Foundation created a scholarship fund to enable a Native American student to enroll in the Mentor Program, a College of Financial Planning course of instruction.

The scholarship is being given in the amount of $3,885—the cost of the College for Financial Planning's comprehensive Online Mentor program.

This is an online instructor-led class that offers students the opportunity to experience the structure and insight of classroom instruction with the convenience of being able to attend from work or home.

In order to apply, you will need to submit the following information:

Application form; 400-500 word essay; college transcript; two letters of recommendation (either academic or professional); resume; proof of tribal membership.

Applications must be post-marked by March 31, 2009. Applicants will be reviewed by an independent panel of judges involved in SRI, which will include representation from Native American communities and financial planners.

More information on this program is available at: www.cffp.edu.
