Estate planning service free to members

The Institute for Indian Estate Planning and Probate, in partnership with the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, is offering free estate planning and comprehensive will writing services to tribal members.

Michelle Watchman, a third year law student from Lewis and Clark Law School, is the legal extern spending the summer working here in Warm Springs.

She is Navajo and Tlingit, born and raised in Alaska.

At Lewis and Clark, she is working toward a law degree with certification in Natural Resources Law, emphasizing Indian law. She went to undergraduate school in Seattle.

With supervision from a licensed attorney, Michelle is available from now through the end of July to assist members with estate planning and will preparation, covering all assets including both trust and non-trust property.

If you are interested in scheduling an appointment or finding out more information, call 553-3148 or stop by and visit room 110 in the Family Resource Center.

There are also sign-up sheets located at the Warm Springs

Seniors Program and the IIM Office in the Administration Building.

Additionally, if you met with the legal extern last summer to began your will preparation but were not able to complete it at that time, please contact Michelle to address any concerns and finalize any unfinished documents.

The Institute for Indian Estate Planning and Probate was established at Seattle University School of Law in 2005. Its mission is to provide Indian people with the information necessary to make informed decisions about their property.

Each summer, the institute places legal externs on various reservations and Indian communities in eight different states. This is the third year that a legal extern has been in Warm Springs assisting tribal members with estate planning and probate.

Boarding schools hosting orientation

Boarding school orientation will be on Friday and Saturday, June 26-27. The orientation will begin at 10 a.m. both days in the first floor training room of the Education building.

Come and meet boarding school representatives from Chemewa High School, Riverside High School, Sherman High School and Flandreau High School. Parents may also meet with the representatives. Deadline for applications is July 31. For more information, call Higher Education at 553-3311.
