Meadows welcomes tribes to Ski Day

Jesslynn Anderson (front) and Ethan Brunoe (behind) skiing at Mount Hood Meadows. Mount Hood Meadows has sponsored tribal ski days for the past several years.

For the past several years, Mt. Hood Meadows and the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs have partnered on Tribal Ski Day.

In the summer, the tribes and Meadows sponsor huckleberry berry picking on the slopes of Mt. Hood, part of the traditional Ceded Lands of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs.

On the last Friday in February, 50 Warm Springs tribal members were guests of Mt. Hood Meadows. They enjoyed the superb Meadows sunshine and powder on one of the best ski days of year.

This was the Eleventh Annual Tribal Ski Day.

"For years we would see the night skiing lights on the mountain, and wonder," said Tribal

Councilman J.P. Patt. "Although on our mountain, this was a place we did not go... Now we ski and board on the mountain, have tribal member employment, and are a full partner in the stewardship of Mt. Hood."

In August, Tribal elders are invited to the Hood River Meadows area for huckleberry picking in an area posted as traditional tribal picking lands.
