

History organization visiting W.S.

KWSO will host StoryCorps for four weeks to help record Native and Oregon stories. StoryCorps, a national non-profit organization, is dedicated to recording, preserving and sharing the stories of Americans from all backgrounds and beliefs.

The group will visit the Warm Springs Reservation from July 7-30, as part of its cross-country MobileBooth tour.

StoryCorps' MobileBooth—an Airstream trailer outfitted with a recording studio—will be parked in the Campus area of Warm Springs at the Fire and Safety building, 2112 Wasco Street.

Reservations will be open at 10 a.m. on June 23. To make a reservation, participants can call StoryCorps' 24-hour toll-free reservation line at 1-800-850-4406 or visit storycorps.org. Additional appointments will be available on July 8.

The interviews

StoryCorps will visit Warm Springs to provide an opportunity for local residents to record and preserve the rich stories of their culture and heritage.

A trained StoryCorps facilitator will guide participants through the interview process. At the end of each 40-minute recording session, participants will receive a complimentary CD copy of their interview.

With participant permission, a second copy will be archived at the American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress for future generations to hear.

Founded in 2003 by award-winning documentary producer and MacArthur "Genius" Grant recipient Dave Isay, StoryCorps aims to create a growing portrait of who we are as Americans.

By traveling to every corner of the country, StoryCorps currently has one of the largest collections of voices ever gathered, with interviews collected from more than 70,000 participants in all 50 states.

"StoryCorps tells the true American story—that we are a people defined by small acts of courage, kindness and heroism," says Isay.

"Each interview reminds people that their lives matter and will not be forgotten. By strengthening connections between people and building an archive that reflects the rich diversity of American voices, we hope to build StoryCorps into an enduring institution that will touch the lives of every American family."

"This is a great opportunity for individuals to honor someone significant to them," says KWSO Station Manager Sue Matters.

"Whether asking an elder about their childhood, recording a great storyteller, exploring cultural practices or learning more about a moment in time... everyone who participates will have the chance to make a really lasting memory."

StoryCorps partnered with the Smithsonian National Museum of the American Indian in November to record and preserve Native voices from eight different tribes as part of American Indian Heritage Day and StoryCorps' 2010 National Day of Listening.

The National Day of Listening is a national holiday started by StoryCorps in 2008.

On the day after Thanksgiving, StoryCorps asks all Americans to take an hour and record an interview with a loved one. Consider it an alternative to "Black Friday" shopping sprees.

To ensure the diversity of the participants, StoryCorps sponsors major initiatives:

Historians collect the stories of Latinos throughout the United States and Puerto Rico; Griot preserves the voices and experiences of African Americans; the National Teachers Initiative collects, preserves, and shares stories that celebrate the profound impact of great educators on all of our lives; and the September 11 Initiative honors and remembers the stories of those most personally affected by the events of September 11, 2001.

To help offset its operating costs, StoryCorps suggests a donation of at least $25 for each MobileBooth interview. If participants cannot afford to meet the suggested donation, they may participate at no cost.

StoryCorps' mission is to provide Americans of all backgrounds and beliefs with the opportunity to record, preserve, and share their stories. Each week, millions of Americans listen to StoryCorps' award-winning broadcasts on NPR's Morning Edition.

Timber: decision pending

In a lawsuit settlement with the BIA, the tribes were awarded over $30 million to be used for natural resource restoration.

Some of this money could be used for jobs in forestry restoration, according to Natural Resources.

The sustainable timber harvest of 31 million board feet could be sold with revenue to the tribes several times more than the recent dividends paid by WSFPI.

The WSFPI dividend to the tribes recently was about $1.5 million. Selling the sustainable cut could be three to four times more than that.

Tribal Council called for last week's workshop "so we can make an informed decision" on the timber question, said Councilman J.P. Patt.

That decision could come next month, Council members said.

UAVs

But the tribes may be in a unique position to develop such a facility, he said. Benefits to the tribes would be jobs and revenue.

This project could be expanded to include test facilities for other types of unmanned vehicles, such as vehicles that travel on land, or on or under water, Anspach said.

Estate planning service

Oregon Law School student Zac Harris is in Warm Springs this summer, working with community members on estate planning and will writing.

Harris currently has an office at the administration building, by Realty; but will be moving to an office with the Community Action Team in the Family Resource Center next week.

The summer estate-planning program is administered by the Institute for Indian Estate Planning & Probate (IIEPP), part of the Seattle University Law School.

The IIEPP hires, trains and oversees second- and third-year law students who will work on or near Indian communities throughout the Northwest, including Warm Springs.

Harris is meeting individually with clients, helping them organize their trust and non-trust assets, and preparing estate planning documents, including wills, health care directives, etc.

His legal work is supervised by Dennis Karnopp, legal counsel for the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs. The will writing and estate planning service is provided at no cost to tribal members.

A sign-up log is being maintained at the IIM Office at the Warm Springs Agency. You can call Harris at 801-712-4339 (cell); or at his office, 541-553-2429. Or email: zharris@uoregon.edu.
