

Threatened bull trout release

The Confederated Tribes, Portland General Electric and federal and state agencies are reintroducing bull trout to the fish's historic habitat.

This week the bull trout are being released into the Clackamas River on the Mt. Hood National Forest.

The release event is scheduled for 1-2 p.m. on Thursday, June 30. The site is 45 miles east of the town of Estacada.

Prior to the releases of bull trout there will be several short streamside presentations or opportunities to speak by representatives from the primary agencies implementing this action.

The tribes, PGE, the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, the U.S. Forest Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service are participating.

The reintroduction of the threatened bull trout is being done pursuant to the Endangered Species Act.

The Clackamas reintroduction is part of a broad strategy to restore the fish to their historic habitat. Bull trout from a wild healthy population in the Metolius River are being used for the Clackamas project.

Biologists will release five to 10 adult bull trout at the event release site. Up to 50 additional adult bull trout may be released that day or subsequent days at other locations in the upper Clackamas River consistent with our strategy to disperse the releases.

While this event highlights reintroduction of the initial 60 adult fish, the long term strategy also includes reintroducing about 1,000 juvenile bull trout annually for seven to 15 years.

While threatened bull trout are native to numerous Northwestern rivers, the last known Clackamas bull trout was documented nearly five decades ago. The goal of this effort is to reestablish a self-sustaining population of 300-500 adults within 20 years.

The reintroduction is part of a multi-state recovery strategy. This reintroduction may lead to other similar efforts to eventually reconnect fragmented populations of bull trout throughout Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, and Nevada. For further information, including directions to the Thursday release site, contact Chris Allen or Janet Lebson of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at 503-231-6179.

Columbia River Indian Fisher's Expo

The 2011 Columbia River Indian Fisher's Exposition is set for Friday, July 22.

The expo, from 7:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m., is sponsored by the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission.

The event, at the Hood River Best Western, is geared to the unique needs of Columbia River Indian fishers.

Topics and activities include: Quality handling, a food handling certification class, icing and transporting, and marketing.

Also: Improving over-the-bank sales; selling at farmers markets; small business funding opportunities.

Breakfast and lunch will be served, and there will be a free raffle and a trade show.

Fish and wildlife committees will be on hand to answer questions.

Discussion after lunch will cover these topics:

Fisher safety, coldwater survival, Columbia River boat safety, boat maintenance, boat engine maintenance, and fiberglass repair.

The event and meals are free for all Warm Springs, Yakama, Umatilla, and Nez Perce fishers. For more information call 503-238-0667 or visit:
