It has only been four months since the doors opened, but the Warm Springs Library is already about to see some exciting changes, thanks to a major award from the Northwest Booksellers Association.

"It started with an email from the author Jane Kirkpatrick," Library Administrator Craig Graham said. "She asked if we would be interested in having our library nominated for the award, which goes to rural libraries. I said of course!"

The library was nominated by Brad Smith of Paulina Springs Books, with a second by Oregon author Jane Kirkpatrick.

Earlier this month, Craig and his staff—William Rhoan, Rosemary Lewis and volunteer Cheryl Archer—traveled to Portland to accept the 2011 Michael Pritikin Rural Library Project award.

"They have all the big-name publishers who are showcasing their new books," Graham said. "They put together boxes of books they were willing to donate to the rural library recipient."

The award means a total of an estimated 40 boxes of books, or 3,000 titles.

"These are new books," he said. "Some are from well-known authors, some are the classics which are being republished. We also got to choose some of the titles ourselves."

The library plans to add more shelves and possibly acquire an additional room at the Family Resources building.

"We're having growing pains. But who's complaining?" Graham said. "This donation will almost double the size of our collection. Folks can expect to see the books hitting the shelves in the next couple of months. A good number of the titles will go into the Book Mobile."

The library website is up and running at:

wslibrary.folletdestiny.com.

"People can search by key word, author, subject. Just type it in. They're able to see everything we have."

Currently, the library holds about 3,400 titles. There are 374 library card holders. 234 books are checked out. Sixty books are overdue.

"Once a person checks out a book, it's good for three weeks. Late charges are 10 cents per day, and once they reach $5.00 we suspend their privileges. But if a person brings a book back, we will consider waiving the late fees."

Future plans for the library might include book drops, ebooks, and extended hours.
