

Museum to honor artist's life, work

The Museum at Warm Springs this year is celebrating its Twentieth Anniversary, having opened in March of 1993.

The main summer exhibit at the museum will feature the life and work of Apolonia Susana Santos.

The summer show will be "Indigenous Elements: The Life and Art of Apolonia Susana Santos."

Apolonia passed in 2006. She was an artist, activist, art and cultural liaison and indigenous warrior.

Susana's paintings and seri-graphs often contain the dramatic and diverse landscape and sky of the High Desert. Snowstorms and the elements of wind, water, sun and moon appear with vigor. Her artistic interpretation of salmon, coyote and big horn sheep express how strongly she was connected to her homelands.

Interpretation of Native women and men in traditional dress always has a contemporary flair. Though small in stature, she stood large in life, as she painted, sculpted and created strategies toward social change for Native youth.

She held great pride in her traditional fishing family, and encouraged all who fished to respect the river and salmon. She was an enrolled member of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs.

Council hears clarification of tow policy

The Tribal Public Safety Branch maintains an impound lot at the industrial park.

If your vehicle ends up being towed to the lot, you have 30 days to pay the tow fee and get the car out.

After 30 days, the vehicle becomes the property of the Police Department, which can then sell the vehicle or sell parts as scrap. Any revenue is dedicated to operating the lot, which is protected by an electrified fence.

There is no daily storage fee for tribal member vehicles at the lot.

The issue of the lot came up last week at Tribal Council. Councilman Eugene Austin Greene Jr. asked Public Safety Branch manager Stan Suenaga about the policy, as a constituent had a vehicle towed from the reservation to a lot in Madras.

The Madras lot charges a daily fee.

Vehicles are towed from the reservation to the Madras lot only when the Warm Springs impound lot is completely full, said Suenaga.

The Police Department has been doing a good job lately of keeping the lot less than full; so vehicles are not being towed to Madras, Suenaga said.

The average tow cost for a vehicle towed from the Agency area is about $120, Suenaga said. The fee can be as high as $200 to $300 for vehicles towed from outlying areas.
