Plan would return timberlands to tribes

(AP) — Sen. Ron Wyden is shopping the idea of returning control to two Indian tribes of about 30,000 acres of federal timberlands in southwestern Oregon as part of his strategy for solving the longstanding problems of timber counties.

The Oregon Democrat said that the legislative proposal fits into his goals of increasing timber production on federal tracts known as the O&C Lands to provide more revenue to counties, protecting special places such as wilderness, and renewing a federal subsidy for timber counties for one more year while this falls into place.

The tribes “want to look at approaches in the forestry area that balance and really address this concern I hear at every town hall meeting, which is how are you going to increase the cut to create jobs, and how are you going to protect treasures,” Wyden said from Washington, D.C. “That message is exactly what the tribes are trying to communicate.”

The proposal calls for transferring 15,000 acres from the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs, to be held in trust for the Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua and Siuslaw Indians. Another 17,000 would go to the Cow Creek Band of the Umpqua Tribe of Indians.

Bob Garcia, chairman of the Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua, and Siuslaw Indians, said the transfer would right an old wrong, when more than 1 million acres of reservation were whittled away from the tribes, and give the tribes a chance to put the land to work for everyone in a way it hasn't seen for many years.

“Our tribe is one of the few tribes (in Oregon) that never received either land or money for what was taken,” Garcia said from tribal headquarters in Coos Bay.

Giving the tribes greater control over how the land is managed would serve as an example of what counties could do if they achieved the same kind of control over the O&C lands, he added. Management would be done under federal environmental laws.

Wayne Shammel, tribal attorney for the Cow Creek Band, said they intentionally chose less productive timberlands in the center of the area proposed for their reservation more than a century ago, but never granted, to minimize the political opposition.

Judge rescinds Calif. Indian tribe's casino

PAUMA VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A San Diego County Indian tribe says a federal court decision to rescind a gambling compact will save it nearly $100 million in either returned payments to the state or future costs.

The U.S. District Court decision allows the Pauma Band of Mission Indians to return to its original agreement with the California Gambling Control Commission in 2000.

The Paumas stated in their complaint that the state mistakenly informed the tribe — through an erroneous calculation — that there were no more available gambling licenses under the previous compact.
