

Leonard receives ring for NABA win

Andy Leonard and the Portland Red Sox have received their World Series Champions rings for their victory in the 2012 National Adult Baseball Association 50-plus World Series.

Leonard batted .652 during the series, going 15 for 23.

The tournament was in October in Major League Baseball spring training fields at Phoenix, Ariz. The fields are used by the Anaheim Angels, Chicago Cubs, Cleveland Indians, Cincinnati Reds, Milwaukee Brewers, Seattle Mariners and Oakland A's.

For the tournament, teams from throughout the U.S. came together in a nationwide league, the National Adult Baseball Association, for the week long World Series.

"We played five games in four days, going unbeaten 5-0 in Pool Play," said Leonard, who works at Community Counseling.

"We played Colorado in the first round and beat them 18-3, then beat Texas 12-0," he said.

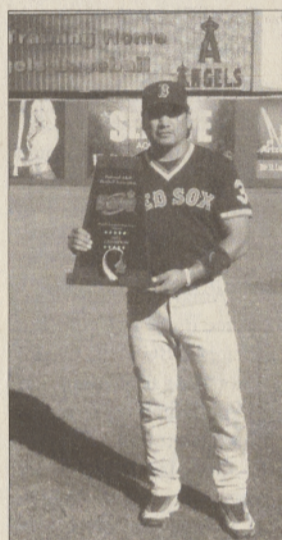

The Portland Red Sox then faced Team USA in the championship. "We won 17-3 to win my first World Series in 16 years attending the tournament," Leonard said.

"I've played on local teams from Portland, California and West Virginia in past tournaments," he added.

"This will be my nineteenth season playing in NABA. I play in a 35+ league and 38+ league with the Portland Hammers with our season opener April 28, 2013 and ending in mid September 2013."

Permit now required for mushrooms

Tribal members do not need a permit to harvest, possess or transport less than one gallon of mushrooms on the reservation or in the state of Oregon.

It is encouraged that all tribal members planning on harvesting more than one gallon of mushrooms obtain a free mushroom permit available at the Forestry office.

Information from mushroom permits will help the tribes manage this resource.

Married into tribes

Individuals married to an enrolled member cannot harvest mushrooms without a mushroom permit. A special permit is available to these individuals to harvest mushrooms when accompanied by an enrolled tribal member.

Non members, non-MIT

Non-tribal members and non-MIT's cannot harvest mushrooms on the reservation.

Resale permits

A resale mushroom permit is required if:

You are 16 years or older and harvest mushrooms to sell, or;

You are married into the tribe and will harvest mushrooms with a tribal member, or;

You harvest, possess or transport more than one gallon of mushroom on the Warm Springs Reservation or in the state of Oregon.

Tribal enrollment card or picture identification for MIT's must be in the permittee's possession while harvesting and transporting mushrooms.

Resale permits are free to tribal members and MIT's.

Permits are available at the Forestry office at the industrial park. The number there is 541-553-2416.

Violation of the permit requirement can result in a citation.

Know your mushrooms

Each year interest has been growing in harvesting edible mushrooms from the Warm Springs Reservation.

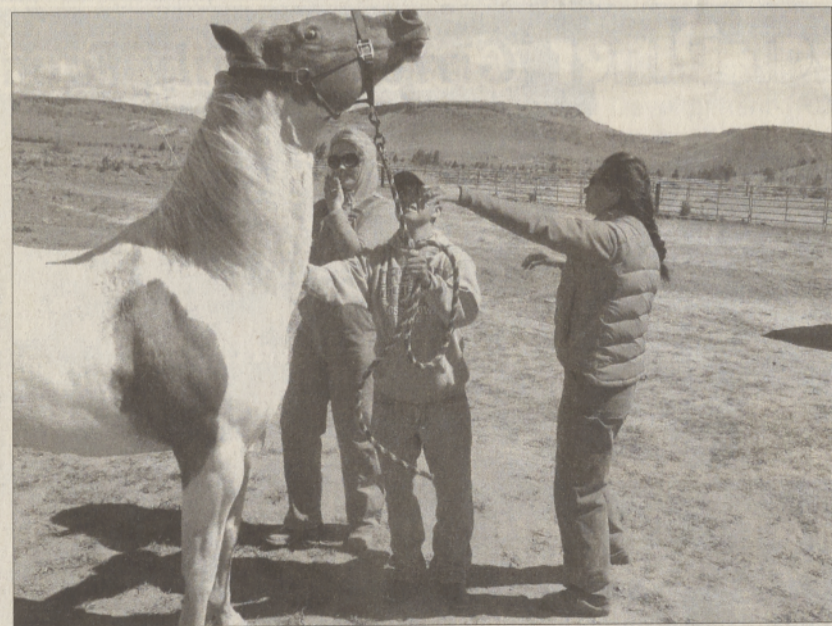

Proper identification and determination of whether a mushroom is edible is solely the responsibility of the picker. Many questions often asked by the novice picker are: What is it? Is it edible? How do you cook it?

There are many plant guidebooks available to assist with the identification, and can be found at local bookstores or libraries. Information can also be found at the local Extension service.

A word to the wise: When in doubt, throw it out.

Horse clinic

Dave McMechan/Spilyay

OSU Extension hosted the horse clinic this week at the rodeo grounds. Weston Heath brought his horse to the clinic, organized by Extension's Fara Brummer (left). The clinic usually provides shots to about 40 horses, said Brummer.
