Blackfeet release man jailed for criticism

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) – A Blackfeet tribal member has been released on $500 bail after spending five days in jail over Facebook postings critical of the tribe's governing council, an arrest the tribe's chairman said was necessary to protect the council members.

Bryon Farmer's postings on the Blackfeet Against Corruption Facebook page have been sharp in their criticism of the Blackfeet Tribal Business Council. Since last year, five council members have been suspended or removed in intra-tribal disputes, leaving a partially vacant body to rule under an emergency declared by Chairman Willie Sharp Jr.

Critics such as Farmer say

Sharp and his allies are ruling by fiat, and there is no emergency. Some of the suspended council members have asked for Bureau of Indian Affairs to intervene in what they call a constitutional crisis, with no results.

Farmer was arrested earlier this month, a day before he said he planned to unveil a float at North American Indian Days that would show the Blackfeet people won't tolerate corrupt leaders.

Farmer lives in Great Falls, but was arrested while attending a family gathering in Browning. He was charged with violating a tribal ordinance outlawing statements meant to harm, discredit or expose a council member to hatred, ridicule or contempt.

Tribal prosecutor Carl Pepion cited the Facebook postings in a June 28 court document charging him with violating the Blackfeet ordinance and signed a warrant for his arrest.

Sharp said the tribal council was worried that Farmer might incite violence during the annual event.

"We were within our rights as a tribe to protect the interests of our members," Sharp said. "When they cross the line and start inciting violence, that's when you have to take it seriously."

"Guess who's back?" Farmer wrote on the Facebook page after he was released from jail.
