Proclamation: results are measurable

(Continued from page 1) The Secretary-Treasurer is the lead coordinator, working with Finance and the general managers. The success in reaching this goal will be clear each budget year, with regular progress reports during the year from Finance and the S-T. The Twenty-Sixth Tribal Council has passed two balanced budgets, for 2014 and 2015, the first for the tribes in several years. The deficit spending of the previous years led to the serious budget cuts of 2014. The second goal of the first priority is: "The Tribal Council will develop a plan to replenish and rebuild the Tribe's revenue reserve, per capita, and senior reserve funds to sustainable levels over time." These funds had been depleted by the years of deficit spending before 2014. The third goal of the budget priority: "The Tribal Council will develop and approve a plan to expand its grant writing capacity in order to maximize the leveraging of tribal funds and resources with federal, state, foundation and corporate grants." The fourth and final goal of the budget priority: "The Tribal Council will identify and develop near-term (1-5 years) and long-term (6-15 years) revenue projections from all available and potential resources in order to improve the Tribe's financial planning, budgeting and reporting." The Secretary-Treasurer and Tribal Council worked on Proclamation 26 with Don Sampson, general manager of Warm Springs Ventures, the tribal economic development enterprise. "If the tribe continues to use this process—setting achievable goals, establishing priorities, and measuring results—it will get better and better at it. Results will come quicker and the community will see the impact. In my opinion, this Council is already well on its way to rebuilding the Warm Springs Nation."

(The next article on Proclamation 26 will be in regard to the Education priority.)
