1986 - 2005 Spilyays now online

Complete editions of the Spilyay Tymoo from 1986 through 2005 are now available online. Anyone interested can browse these editions by date.

The site also has a keyword or phrase search function. So you can locate a particular article or picture, clip the item electronically, and print it or keep it digitally on your computer.

The online site hosting the old Spilyay editions is that of the Historic Oregon Newspapers, where you can find back issues from many newspapers in the state. Their website is:

oregonnews.uoregon.edu

From that site go to 'Titles' and find the Spilyay Tymoo in the alphabetical listing. The little calendar icon takes you to a calendar view of the available issues.

Keyword search

If you want to do a keyword search, click the 'Search' tab on the Oregon Historic Newspapers home page. This will take you to the search page.

In the 'Select Newspaper' box, again the titles are listed alphabetically: Scroll down to Spilyay Tymoo.

Then enter keywords in whichever search box makes

For a phrase, or a first and last name together, the recommendation is the last box. This will search the words "within 5 words of each other" for the most accurate results.

When you are looking at a particular page of interest, the buttons in the grey bar at the top of the viewer allow you to zoom in and out. You can use the little blue scissor icon in the top right corner to clip an article or image—a new tab will open, and you can save to your computer or print.

The Spilyay online project was made possible by a grant through the Digital Scholarship Center at the University of Oregon Libraries. Sheila Rabun, digital project manager at the University of Oregon Library, coordinated the effort.

The next step in the Spilyay online project is to post the remaining editions, from the first one in 1976 through early 2014. The spring 2014to-present editions are availat the website: wsnews.org

Meanwhile, the 1986-2005 editions make for some good browsing—you might want to check it out.

Memories with a rich flavor of character

Letters to the editor

As I look back... the noise of cattle in the corral during cattle ride season, the smell of baked yeast bread and huckleberry pies from a wood cook stove, the sound of 30 children raised within the walls of this ranch home, the echo of a farming tractor driven by Ida McKinley after a full day's work as Tribal Court Judge.

I envision Maxine McKinley when she was brought to Warm Springs from Celilo Falls after the passing of her mother when Maxine was the tender age of 6 or 7 years old in 1931, with her three sisters, Bessie McKinley Eder, Cecelia McKinley Frank and Virginia McKinley, to be raised by Isaac and Ida McKinley.

Maxine was born on April 30, 1925 to Charlie McKinley and Annie Jim McKinley. Their home was in the rimrocks of Celilo Falls, where a rich traditional lifestyle was the family's custom and way of life. In Central Oregon, Maxine would go dig roots, pick huckleberries and pick potatoes at a ranch in Powell Butte (Sidney Carter and famcommitment," cleaning the tribal administration building, Tribal Court, the school, the Warm Springs Police Department and Natural Resources building. Other employment she held was in Tectronix and as a lookout worker. She worked until recently, when she was forced to retire around 75 years old.

Maxine had two children: Alexander Tohet and Teresa McKinley. She helped raise many foster children in a two-room home up along Highway 3.

Maxine could be heard singing loud as she was in the kitchen canning vegetables, deer meat and fruits. She spent many hours sewing and making school clothes for many children: underclothes, shirts, pants and dresses.

Maxine enjoyed her skills of beadwork and many traditional crafts she learned as a young child.

Today you go to her home and she will be washing her clothes by hand, while her washing machine sets motionless and quiet.

She is to be honored for her contributions of many years of commitment. She holds a personality and character that is soft and gentle. When she meets anyone along her way she offers a word of encouragement and hope.

Maxine will be 90-91 years old in April. You ask her, "What gave her a long enjoyable and comfortable life?" She will tell you the spiritual strength and belief she holds, and all her family that embrace and lover her dearly.

At Extension

My name is Scott Duggan and I want to introduce myself as the new OSU Extension agent for Warm Springs. I am from Central Oregon and very excited to be in this agriculture position.

My mission is to be a resource for livestock producers, gardeners, horse owners or anyone else with an interest in agriculture. I am here to answer questions, teach agriculture classes and help folks looking to establish an ag business.

Equipping the next generation of tribal agricultural producers is key to developing greater food sovereignty and self-sufficiency.

Native youth ages 13-18 and college-age with an interest in agriculture and food production are encouraged to consider attendance at this summer's "Native Youth in Food and Agriculture: Summer Summit" at the University of Arkansas July 19-28, 2015. The conference costs are underwritten by the hosting organizations, and there may be scholarships for travel costs for early applicants. Check out the IAC website for more information and registration materials at:

www.IndianAgLink.com

Or contact Scott Duggan at Warm Springs OSU Extension, 541-553-3238 with further questions. The application deadline is June 1, but apply early to be eligible for scholarship opportunities.

I can be reached at:

scott.duggan@oregonstate.edu Or by phone: 541-553-3238. Upcoming OSU Extension ag classes include:

April 8: Gardening class: Cool season veggies. 5:30 p.m. at the Simnasho Community Garden. This is free.

April 10: Wasco bull tour. 8:30a.m.-7 p.m. Wasco County Fairgrounds in Tygh Valley. Cost is $45.

April 18: Spring gardening seminar. 8-4:30 p.m. Deschutes County Fairgrounds. $10 per class.

April 23: Gardening class, 5:30-7 p.m. Warm Springs Community Garden. Free.

To keep in mind while gambling

Gambling—it can be a fun form of entertainment for most adults. But its important to keep these tips in mind:

· Set the alarm on your watch or cell phone to the time limit you set for your-

· Do not borrow money to gamble.

And never gamble to win back losses. For help you can call the Oregon Gambling Helpline at 1800-695-4648 or 1-800-695 My Limit or contact Warm Springs Community Counseling.

Warm Springs 4-H gaining momentum

Beth Ann Beamer, 4-H coordinator, Warm Springs OSU Extension Office

4-H is strengthening its presence in Warm Springs once again.

This month, we feature two new clubs: The Horse Club and the Outdoor Club.

The Warm Springs 4-H Horse Club focuses on working with young horses off the range, as well as performance with more seasoned horses.

Led by volunteer leaders Andrea Sapuay and Shontae Thomas, the 4-H horse project has many options for involvement, and is open to youth fourth-grade and up.

Some of our members are just getting comfortable working with horses, and training up range colts for show and

The 4-H Outdoor Club is for all youth fourth-grades and up.

Led by Frank Smith and Charles "Chips" Kalama, this club is centered on all things outdoors, including fishing, hiking, camping, traditional practices, and other outdoor activities including snow

This club is open for new members, so join us if these activities sound like fun!

4-H is the nationally-recognized positive youth development program. One of the most important aspects of 4-H is the involvement of caring adults as mentors for youth.

Our program is always in need of caring, qualified adult volunteers. If you are interested in working with youth, come by the OSU Office and fill out the paperwork. Trainings can be arranged one-on-one or with a small group.
