

STAND youth program at Academy

Native American youth are disproportionately affected by a number of health challenges, including underage drug and alcohol use, violence and self-harm, early pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

Unfortunately, relatively few culturally appropriate health interventions have been designed for, or rigorously evaluated among Native American youth. As a result, many Native teens do not receive sufficient or appropriate health education on these topics.

To meet this need, the Oregon Health and Science University (OHSU), and the

The Warm Springs Native Stand program is available to students ages 12-18 at the Warm Springs Eagle Academy. The morning club meets from 7:45-8:50 a.m.

The first class session starts Tuesday, Oct. 20. Applications are available at the middle school office. Or for more information contact the Prevention Team at 541-553-3205. Or talk with Scott Kalama or Anita Davis.

Northwest Portland Area Indian Health Board have collaborated to disseminate a school- and community-based youth development program.

The program is based on Native Stand: Students Together Against Negative Decisions.

Background

Today's youth face many challenges. Native youth also face those same challenges, in addition to navigating and living in two worlds. Tribal people and leaders are keenly aware of some of these challenges. However, rather than focus on the ongoing problems, there is one proactive, proven approach: Native Stand, a program of action with results.

Implementation

Native Stand is a culturally relevant inter-tribal curriculum for pre-teen to high school age (12-18 years) Native teens that draws on cultural teachings and values from across Indian Country. The curriculum is designed to address healthy decision-making holistically and develop skills associated with maintaining and promoting tribal adolescent sexual health and becoming a peer educator.

Museum, OneBeat hosting music workshop

The Museum at Warm Springs will host a workshop by international musicians traveling with OneBeat.

OneBeat is the pioneering music diplomacy program initiated by the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, produced by Bang on a Can's Found Sound Nation.

OneBeat are artists in residence at Caldera, near Sisters. People of all ages are welcome to attend this free workshop that promises to be a dynamic educational event and opportunity for unique sharing through music.

The Warm Springs workshop is set for Thursday, October 29, from 3:30-5 p.m. at the museum.

After the workshop at 5:30 p.m., don't miss the Museum at Warm Springs opening reception of the Tribal Member Art Exhibit.

Caldera works with young people from central Oregon including Warm Springs. Caldera begins with students in the sixth grade and sticks with them through high school in weekly mentoring classes, high school workshops, weekend intensives and summer camp.

For more information on the upcoming workshop, contact Elizabeth Quinn Phone, 541-419-9836. Or e-mail: Elizabeth.Quinn@CalderaArts.org

Business start-up weekend

The Central Oregon Community College Center for Entrepreneurial Excellence and Development will host the Oregon All-State Education and Entrepreneurship Startup Weekend this month.

The event is set for Friday through Sunday, Oct. 23-25, at the recently completed COCC Redmond Technology Education Center.

The COCC Center for Entrepreneurial Excellence and Development, partnering with UP Global, invites students from all 17 community colleges, nine public universities, several private colleges and all 13 Central Oregon high schools to participate.

In addition, local would-be entrepreneurs are invited to join in. Participants will have a chance to take an idea and run with it hard for 54 hours.

Entrepreneurs will create a working business plan along with a winning pitch for a new product or service, all within one long weekend. Up to 75 students and entrepreneurs will form teams and build innovative new businesses focused on the athletic and outdoor industry. This event is the first of its kind in the nation.

The goal of the national Startup Weekend organization, a non-profit committed to helping take ideas to startup much more accessible, is to bring together people with different skill sets for a weekend-long crash course in how to share ideas, form teams, and launch companies.
