

TERO, members attend Women in Trades career fair

Tribal employment workers attended the recent Women in the Trades Career Fair, held in Portland.

From the tribes were tribal Employment Rights Office (TERO) dispatcher Mary Sando-Emhoolah, and TERO commissioners Jonathan Smith and Marge Kalama. Smith is also with the Warm Springs Ross program.

Melinda Poitra, Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA), and four youth took part, with tribal member Devontre Thomas, Power and Water's Wilfred Sando, and TERO worker Ramone Thomas.

The exhibitors at the Women in the Trades Career Fair were the BPA, the city of Portland, IBEW, Les Schwab, Mt. Hood Community College, the Northwest College of Construction, ODOT, PacificCorp, PCC trades and industry, to name a few. In all there were 70 employment exhibitors.

The career fair featured the various labor trades, plumbing, welding, electrical, construction and operator trades. Participants met with presenters and experienced first-hand how to do some of the trades.

Ramone Thomas spoke to the tribal group at lunch about his experience working on the Ross Island Bridge. This was through the Grand Ronde TERO program, he said. Thomas currently works in Portland.

The Warm Springs contingent attended to experience the career, and to gather information to host a Native Women in the Trades Career Fair here in Warm Springs, said Sando-Emhoolah.

The idea would be invite the Columbia River and other tribes, and their TERO representatives.
