Flu shots available as season approaches

Australia had a bad flu season this year, with more than twice as many reported cases as last year. This is an indicator that the flu season in the U.S. could be a bad one as well, said Katy Russell, Warm Springs Community Health director.

Good news is that the flu vaccine appears to be a good match for this year's strain, Ms. Russell said. Community Health has flu shots available at the clinic. They will also be making visits around the community in coming weeks, providing vaccinations.

Nurses will start visiting local schools giving flu shots on Tuesday, October 17. On that morning at 9 they will be at the Warm Springs Early Childhood Education Center.

On Wednesday, October 18, at 10 a.m. the nurses will visit the Warm Springs Academy.

On Thursday, October 19 at 9 they will be at the Jefferson County Middle School and Madras High School. Students must have signed parent consent to receive a shot. Flu shots are also available at Pharmacy at the clinic.

Some other things to keep in mind:

Pregnant women may receive any licensed, recommended, and age-appropriate flu vaccine.

Getting an annual flu vaccine is the first and best way to protect yourself and your family from the flu. Flu vaccination can reduce flu illnesses, doctors' visits, and missed work and school due to flu, as well as prevent flu-related hospitalizations.

The more people who get vaccinated, the more people will be protected from flu, including older people, very young children, pregnant women, and people with certain long-term health conditions who are more vulnerable to serious flu complications.

Darkness to Light Child Abuse Prevention Training will be in Warm Springs on Thursday, November 2 from 5-8 p.m. at the Community Center. The training provides participants with five steps to better protect children from sexual abuse. To sign up, call Rosa by phone or text at 541-350-5200.

Klamath-Modoc artist featured at Water of the West exhibit

A $100,000 grant to the High Desert Museum in Bend will help with the creation of an interdisciplinary exhibition, Water in the West.

The project will connect artists from multiple mediums with scientists to creatively approach the topic of water in Oregon, and explore the relationship between art and science.

The exhibition will be on display from May 2019 to November 2019. The project is funded through Oregon Community Foundation. Artistic disciplines include visual arts, music and spoken word.

Weaving together multiple artistic mediums with science and natural and cultural history, Water in the West will provide a compelling exploration of water in Oregon.

For the exhibition, the museum will commission four works of art that will explore a variety of topics related to water in the West, including biodiversity in riparian ecosystems, how water has shaped the West's natural, cultural, and geological history, and contemporary issues, such as water usage, Indigenous rights and the impacts of climate change.

The exhibition will feature:

A visual art installation by contemporary Klamath/Modoc artist Ka'ila Farrell-Smith. Farrell-Smith uses painting and sculptural art forms, such as basket weaving and drum making, to explore the space in-between the Indigenous and western worlds, and several of her recent works have explored Indigenous water rights.

A spoken word piece composed by critically acclaimed artist/performer Jason Graham (also known as Mosley Wotta).

An intermedia art installation created by Harmonic Laboratory, a collective of artists who integrate art, science and the humanities.

Las Vegas

Felicia escaped holding another person's hand, with a wounded person holding on to her for support.

Reina and Alexis were also separated, as the crowd of 22,000 people rushed for the exits and fences. At the time

Alfred was just outside the venue. He had been walking back to the concert from the hotel, when the firing began.

That night all four of them made it back to the hotel room. They slept an hour or two, and then started back to Warm Springs.

If you are exclusively breastfeeding your baby starting from month 1 to 6 months, you are invited to join the 6 Months Breastfeeding Club. The first meeting is October 26. It will be held Thursday's once a month from 2:30-4 p.m. in the IHS Atrium. Gifts and snacks will be shared. If you have questions contact Janet or Sheryl at 541-553-2460.
