

More structures come down on campus

The next building in line this week for demolition in the downtown is the old clubhouse, the biggest structure among those slated for removal.

The clubhouse—like the others being hauled away—had been abandoned for years, posing a potential asbestos and lead paint hazard.

Tribal Council this week heard an update on the project from Chief Operations Officer Alyssa Macy.

Some of the buildings have a sentimental value for people, she said, because of

Now-vacant lot by the old elementary school cafeteria.

memories of living there. But the removal project is the needed as the first phase in the downtown development plan, she said.

Tribal Councilman Jody

Calica said the campus area is looking better without the abandoned structures.

Some trees will also have to be removed, as they may pose a hazard or obstacle to future use of the sites, Ms. Macy said. The old school buildings at Simnasho are part of the removal program, she said.

The contractor for the project is the environmental construction company 3 Kings, based in Vancouver.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs is funding the project, as these are BIA buildings.
