CRITFC report reviews historic Fish Accords

This year marks the Ten Year Anniversary of the signing of the Columbia Basin fish Accords.

It was on 2008 the Warm Springs, Yakama and Umatilla tribes, and the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission signed the Accords.

On behalf of the federal government were the Bonneville Power Administration, Army Corps of Engineers, and Bureau of Reclamation. CRITFC explains the significance of the Accords:

The partnership they forged ushered in a new era of regional salmon restoration and financial predictability.

The Accords provided secure funding for long-term habitat restoration and fish survival and passage improvement projects at the dams.

These projects furthered the tribes' Wy-Kan-Ush-Mi Wa-Kish-Wit vision to maintain and enhance salmon populations for future generations.

funding that the Accords provided allowed the tribes to implement more complex and larger projects not possible under the previous funding methods. The BPA gained a ten-year period of certainty for hydropower generation during which the tribes agreed to not litigate for additional fish protection at the dams or the breaching of the Snake River dams.

By working together, the parties shifted their relationships from adversarial to one based on negotiation and collaboration and the region and salmon benefited as a result.

CRITFC just released its Ten Year Report on the Columbia Basin Fish Accords. This detailed report gives a thorough overview of the tribal projects and results of the Fish Accords. An example:

“Forty percent of the Warm Springs, Yakama, Umatilla and CRITFC Accords funding went to watershed restoration efforts. Over the course of the last decade, they completed 14,586 in-stream actions and 404 out-of-stream actions.”

Name: Gary Katchia
Age: 17 years old
Summer youth worker for WIOA-Native Aspirations: Summer Rec Aide

This year Gary is working with Summer Rec, and he is learning new things, making friends and working with children. “Team work and discipline,” is something he said he could use outside the work area. In high-school Gary plays baseball and football. His favorite sport is football because he loves the contact. After high-school he plans on going to college, or maybe start in the workforce.

Name: Adam Rubio
Age: 14 years old
Summer youth worker for WIOA-Native Aspirations: Early Childhood Education teacher aide

This is Adam's first year working. He likes that he works with the children, and with working with children he is learning new things through play and interactions. In high-school he plans on trying out for football because “it's fun and an aggressive sport.” Adam has four years of high-school and hasn't planned out his future, yet.
