The Year in Review ~ 2019 ~

The following is a review of the some of the news that happened over the past 12 months on the reservation.

January

As January 2019 opens, federal offices on the reservation—the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and Office of the Special Trustee—are closed. This is because of the partial federal government shutdown that began in mid December of 2018.

Meanwhile, the Indian Health Services and clinic were on regular business hours; some of the BIA Roads workers were also on the job, working without pay. Elsewhere in January 2019:

There are more than 30 designated tribal fishing sites along the mid Columbia River: The sites are a legacy of the federal government's construction of the dams on the Columbia.

The dams flooded the traditional fishing sites, and also destroyed homes and entire tribal villages. The government for decades now has been obligated to provide housing for tribal members who were displaced from their homes by the dams and reservoirs.

After the construction of the dams, the federal government rebuilt homes for non-Indians who were displaced, but nothing was done for the Native people.

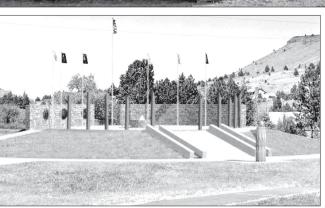

A few years ago, correcting this long-standing omission has a second size of the second size of t ing this long-standing omission became a priority of lawmakers from the Northwest. And as a result of this effort, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is now working on a tribal housing project at the Columbia.

The Corps has received $1.8 million to develop a plan for the housing project. Details—the location and types of housing—are being worked out with the tribes: The Warm Springs, Yakama, Umatilla and Nez Perce

For its part, the Tribal Council has created a new Columbia River Inter-Tribal Housing entity, with a possible name of N'Chi Wana Housing. The board will work with other tribes and the Corps of Engineers on developing and implementing the tribal housing project at the Columbia. In other January news:

Tribal management expects ballots to be in the mail soon for the election of the Twenty-Eighth Tribal Council of the Confederated Tribes. The election will be on April 4. Meanwhile:

The Twenty-Seventh Tribal Council decided to move the blood quantum referendum from mid February to mid March. Recent changes at Administrative Services have required more time to organize the election.

The referendum will ask the members whether the tribes should change how blood quantum is determined for the purposes of automatic enrollment.

The change would be the addition of the 1980 census to the list of baseline census years for determining the Confederated Tribes blood quantum. The change for some would allow the recalculation of the degree of tribal blood—Wasco, Warm Springs and Paiute—a person has, based on the 1980 census.

Early in the year Warm Springs Construction began work on the Veterans Memorial Park (conceptual image at left).

Tribal Council will soon consider a funding proposal for the CP Enterprise-Ventures cannabis/hemp project. The plan calls for growing and processing non-recreational hemp products on the tribes' Schoenhagen property, off Highway 26 across the Deschutes River.

The Ventures' request to Tribal Council is for start-up funding to begin growing hemp. The sooner in the year the plants are in the ground, the larger will be the eventual revenue from sales, the Ventures team said.

The start-up funding would come from the carbon sequestration revenue. Ventures, Natural Resources, Tribal Council and management implemented the carbon project over the past few years, with great success for the tribes.

For years the tribal story as taught in schools has been mis-represented. The curriculum, de-veloped from the non-Indian perspective, has been incomplete and incorrect.

This is changing as the nine tribes of Oregon are developing Native American curricula that will be taught in public schools.

Warm Springs Culture and Heritage, a department of the new Education Branch, is devel-oping the curriculum of the Con-federated Tribes.

Working with tribal elders, Deanie Smith at Culture and Heritage is coordinating the Warm Springs project. The group meets at the Education building, and has developed a draft curriculum that will be refined over the coming months.

The team also hosts community meetings, seeking input. The most recent, for instance, focused on the three Native languages of the Confederated Tribes.
