

U.S. law for Columbia in-lieu fishing sites

The U.S. House of Representatives has passed the Columbia River In-Lieu and Treaty Fishing Access Sites Improvement Act, sending it to the president’s desk to be signed into law.

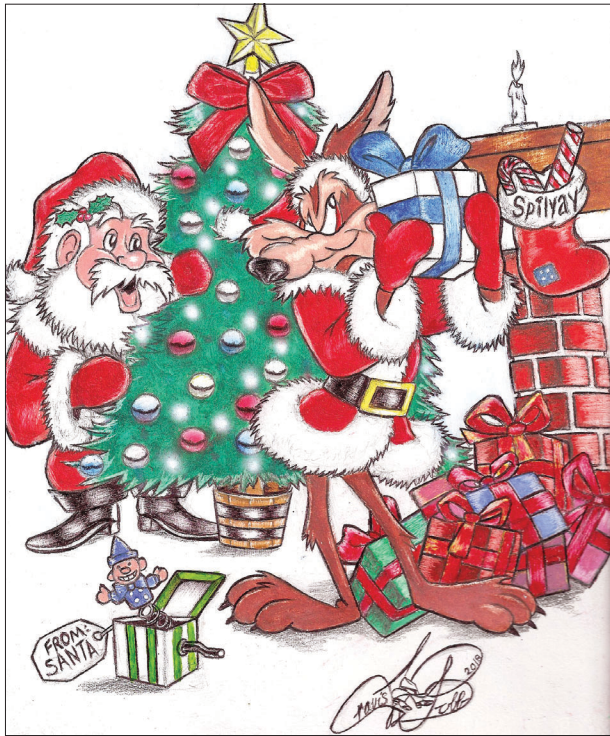

The U.S. senators and congressmen of Oregon and Washington introduced the legislation.

The bill passed the House this week. The bill, authored by Merkley and Blumenauer, was unanimously passed by the U.S. Senate on June 28.

The lation would enable the Bureau of Indian Affairs to make important safety and sanitation improvements at the tribal treaty fishing access sites along the Columbia River, which are on lands held by the United States for the benefit of the four Columbia River Treaty tribes.

“The current conditions at Columbia River fishing sites are unacceptable, unjust, and must be fixed,” Merkley said.

“I’ve personally seen the shocking conditions at Lone Pine. We owe better to the tribal communities in the Northwest, and the very least we can do is uphold our commitments to tribes and ensure basic sanitation and safety. I’m pleased that our colleagues in the House of Representatives have joined us in passing this bill, and I urge the president to sign it into law without delay.”
