Ideas for students learning from home

The following is some of the Oregon Department of Education advice to families on setting up a safe workspace for online school work and study.

As children are spending at least part of their school year at home:

It is important to have workspaces that are safe and healthy. For example:

The computer should be set up with the screen at eye level, so the student can sit up straight and practice good posture.

The chair should provide enough comfort and back support to sit for long periods of time.

Take breaks to stretch and take a walk to avoid sitting all day.

In addition to making things ergonomically correct, it's important to make sure the workplace is conducive to work and learning. For example:

Is the workspace free of clutter and other distractions?

Are supplies like paper, books and pencils at hand and ready to use?

Are things organized so you and your student can easily find things?
