New mural on the old Shell gas station

Warm Springs Academy students recently added some color and artistic character to the old gas station next to the Rainbow Market.

Working with community artist Charlene Dimmick, the students created paintings of three trees by a mountain, using the students' hand prints to fill in the tree leaves.

The mural project was a collaborative effort of the Warm Springs Academy teaching staff, the Papalaxsimisha program, the Warm Springs Police Department, the Warm Springs Community Action Team and community clean-up helpers.

"The significance of the trees in the design is that two tribes came to this land when the reservation was created and later adding one more," Charlene said.

"Over time, we have grown as a tribe and have included those who have come to this land and into this community. Each new year, we will continue to grow like trees."
