Cowlitz campaign to push out rival casinos

Since 2016, the Cowlitz Indian Tribe has paid millions to a Portland consulting firm and its owners to protect its highly successful ilani Casino Resort from unwanted competition—namely other tribes looking to expand their gaming operations in Oregon.

Cowlitz leaders turned to the consultants Matthew Rossman and Bruce Studer and their company—best known for a nearly two-decade quest to build the state's first private, non-tribal casino over the objections of tribes in Oregon.

At the urging of an influential tribal leader, the late David Barnett, the tribe entered into a contract paying from $30,000 to $50,000 a month to R&S Strategy Group or to its owners, Rossman and Studer.

According to a copy of the agreement and records of tribal meetings, as well as interviews with Rossman, the tribe aimed to stave off competitors, particularly the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde and the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians in Oregon.
