

Public comments on restoration assessment

The public comment period is now open on the Mutton Mountains Restoration Project Assessment, as proposed recently by the Resource Management Interdisciplinary Team.

Copies of the Mutton Mountain Restoration Project Assessment are available at the Branch of Natural Resources office, the Forestry Office, and at the Warm Springs Post Office. The public comment period for the assessment is required by the Integrated Resource Management Plan, IRMP.

The Mutton Mountains Restoration Project proposes to increase the vigor and abundance of native plants in the Mutton Mountains; provide alternative water sources; and reduce road access to protect native animals at sensitive times of the year. Other measures are proposed as needed.

The assessment states, "The Mutton Mountains region of the reservation exhibits high ecological diversity seldom found elsewhere. The area hosts an expanding bighorn sheep population, elk, mule deer, feral horses, native pollinators, raptors, and a whole suite of meso-carnivores and apex predators...

"With such a varied ecosystem, biologists for the tribes were tasked with developing a restoration plan that incorporated a multitude of different techniques and actions, to best match each ecotype. For this reason, cultural and prescribed burning, herbicide application, forb and grass re-seeding, riparian shrub planting, guzzler placement, district fence repair, feral horse removal, seasonal road closures, road improvements, and juniper thinning treatments are all proposed."
