

John Anderson scheduled to heat up Casino one more time

The story of John Anderson and his platinum-plus album, Seminole Wind, is the story of the country music "comeback" of the decade. It's the true-to-life, yet larger-than-life, saga of one of the most dramatic career turn-arounds of the 1990's. It's the story of just reward for a singer who originally took country music by storm. His memorable hits from that musical era included "Wild and Blue", "I'm Just An Old Chunk Of Coal," "1959," "I Just Came Home To Count The Memories," "Black Sheep" and "Swingin'."

"Swingin'" was not only the Country Music Association's 1983 Song of the Year. More recently it was cited by the A.M.O.A. as one of its all-time top-forty jukebox hits — right up there with "Hey Jude" and other perennial favorites by The Beatles, Elvis Presley, Frank Sinatra, Patsy Cline, George Jones, and The Rolling Stones.

"Straight Tequila Night," the lead-off single from Seminole Wind (Anderson's debut album for BNA Entertainment), went to number one across the board on every country chart. It was his first bonafide chart-topper since "Black Sheep" in 1983. "When It Comes To You," the second single, reached number two, while "Seminole Winds," the heartfelt title tune soared to number one when released later in 1992. Jay Orr, a noted music writer for the Nashville Banner, was one of several critics to list Seminole Wind in a top-ten album round-up for 1992.

Those of us who have followed the vicissitudes of Anderson's recording career aren't particularly surprised at his "rediscovery" in the wake of Seminole Wind. Those hits which showcased Anderson's arresting, instantly recognizable vocal style; a provocative mixture of honky tonk fervor, rockabilly/outlaw gusto, fiercely determined 17-year old who hit Nashville running in 1972.

Awards include a Grammy Award in 1996 for Amazing Grace: A Country Salute To Gospel. In 1994 the Academy of Country Music honored him with their Career Achievement Award. The same year he received the Country Music Association Album of the Year for Common Threads: The Songs of the Eagles. "Swingin'" won the CMA Single of the Year in 1983. He has also received numerous nominations for Grammys, ACM's and CMAs and has several gold and platinum album certifications.

Tribe donates to establish Native art display

The Portland Art Museum will now be able to display what is considered to be one of the finest collections of Native American art in the country — thanks to a generous donation from the Grand Ronde Tribe.

The Elizabeth Cole Butler collection has been one that the museum has wanted to continuously showcase, but hasn't been able to do so, due to lack of space. This donation, from the Spirit Mountain Community Fund of $100,000 will allow the museum to expand its exhibit space and provide educational opportunities to school children. Elizabeth Cole Butler has been collecting Native art for many years and resides in the Eugene area.

Elizabeth Cole Butler, collector; Bill Mercer, museum curator; John Buchanan, Jr., PAM Executive Director; and Kathryn Harrison, Tribal Chair.
