FIRST AMERICAN EDUCATION SERIES

Seminars About American Indians Taught By American Indians

The First American Education Series is about the journey of American Indians, a journey alive with pain and rich with history, culture, and resounding joy. The curriculum is about American Indians and is taught by American Indians.

The two sites (Chemawa Indian School and Portland State University) were selected to assist with access for community members. The Wednesday classes held at PSU will also be televised to Grand Ronde, Siletz, and Umatilla. The series is open to all.

Health and Wellness

DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES IN TRIBAL COMMUNITIES — ALISON BALL, PHD. This course will discuss strategies to overcome barriers to appropriate care for American Indians with disabilities, along with identifying strengths of Indian people in general.

HOLISTIC HEALTH IN TRIBAL COMMUNITIES — JOHN SPENCE, PHD. This course will examine teachings of the Native American Medicine Wheel passed down through Tribal oral traditions. Traditional tribal teachings will be compared with modern mainstream definitions and treatment strategies aimed at obtaining holistic health.

INDIAN FAMILY WELLNESS PROJECT: A DECOLONIZATION MODEL — TOM BALL, PHD. Provides participants with a model for building programs in Indian Country that can reverse the colonization process. Concepts such as: post colonial psychology, post colonial stress disorder, Tribal consultation, Tribal self-determination, and Tribal self-governance will be addressed.
