Salmon Camps Offered by OMSI

The Oregon Museum of Science and Industry offers two programs this summer free of charge to participants, age 10-18, through generous support though several foundations, including the Tribe.

The students will be exposed to natural resource management careers while working with Native American professionals in fisheries and wildlife management, range management and forestry, field ecology, botany, zoology, hydrology, geology, and archaeology. The goal is to provide students with the experience, knowledge and skills to pursue college degrees and related careers.

Projects include habitat recovery and scientific monitoring on the newly protected 24,000 acre Pine Creek watershed on the John Day River.

Contact: OMSI Salmon Camp, 7171 S.W. Quarry Ave., Redmond, OR 97756. Phone: 541-548-5473 or salmon@omsi.edu.
