

Restoration lesson

Photos by Michelle Alaimo

Tribal members Audrey Mercier, left, and Ashten Leno plug their noses as they try a piece of sushi during a Restoration lesson in the Tribal Chinuk kindergarten class on Tuesday, Nov. 17. This lesson was to teach the kids about new foods that were introduced to their ancestors and them having to eat it or they would go hungry. Below, students in the Tribal Chinuk kindergarten class participate in their Trail of Tears walk on Grand Ronde Road on Wednesday, Nov. 18.

Condor recovery

Willie is one of the California condors that calls the Oregon Zoo breeding facility home.
